INTRODUCTION

This Flash Eurobarometer was carried out at the request of the European Commission's Directorate-General for Enterprise and Industry by the TNS Political & Social network in the 28 Member States of the European Union, and in Turkey, the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Iceland, Norway, Serbia, Montenegro and Israel, between 6 and 11 January 2014. This wave is a follow-up to Flash Eurobarometer no. 370, conducted in January 2013.

The survey was designed to explore a range of aspects regarding holidays in 2013 and 2014, in particular:

- respondents' reasons for going on holiday in 2013
- information sources and tools used to research and organise holidays
- respondents' travel profiles, preferred destinations and holiday types
- satisfaction with various aspects of holidays in 2013
- plans for holidays in 2014, including the potential impact of the current economic situation on these plans

Where possible, results are compared with the last wave of the survey.

Some 31,122 respondents from different social and demographic groups were interviewed via telephone (landline and mobile phone) in their mother tongue on behalf of the Directorate-General for Enterprise and Industry. The methodology used is that of Eurobarometer surveys as carried out by the Directorate-General for Communication ("Strategy, Corporate Communication Actions and Eurobarometer" Unit)¹. A technical note on the manner in which interviews were conducted by the Institutes within the TNS Political & Social network is appended as an annex to this report. Also included are the interview methods and confidence intervals².

Further analysis, through crossing questions as well as Country Fact Sheets, will be included in a subsequent phase.

² The results tables are included in the annex. It should be noted that the total of the percentages in the tables of this report may exceed 100% where the respondent was able to give several answers to the question.

Note: In this report, countries are referred to by their official abbreviation. The abbreviations used in this report correspond to:

* Cyprus as a whole is one of the 28 European Union Member States. However, the 'acquis communautaire' has been suspended in the part of the country which is not controlled by the government of the Republic of Cyprus. For practical reasons, only the interviews carried out in the part of the country controlled by the government of the Republic of Cyprus are included in the 'CY' category and in the EU28 average.

 Provisional abbreviation which in no way prejudges the definitive name of this country, which will be agreed once the current negotiations at the United Nations have been completed.

Without their active participation, this survey would not have been possible.

MAIN FINDINGS

Researching and planning a holiday

- Nearly half the people who went on holiday last year for a minimum of four nights went mainly for the sun/beach, while a third were visiting family, friends or relatives.
- The natural features of a destination are the main reason for wanting to return to the same place for a holiday, according to about half of respondents.
- Recommendations from friends, colleagues or relatives are considered as the most important source of information when it comes to planning holidays, with the Internet coming second.
- Moreover, the Internet was used by around six in ten people when arranging a holiday, a significant increase compared to last year. The use of the Internet to organise holidays varies greatly at a national level, from 19% in Montenegro to 80% in Norway.

The holiday experience

- Among respondents who went on holiday for a minimum of four consecutive nights, slightly more than four in ten took their main holiday in their own country last year, while just under four in ten went to another EU country. Roughly a fifth holidayed outside the EU.
- There was a substantial decrease (-5 percentage points) in the proportion of Europeans who spent their main holiday in their own country in 2013, and an equivalent increase (+5) in those who spent their main holiday in another EU country.
- When considering all holidays taken in 2013, more than half the respondents (57%) went on holiday in their own country, while a similar proportion (54%) holidayed in an EU country.
- The proportion of people who travelled to another EU country ranged from 95% in Luxembourg to 18% in Greece.
- The proportion of EU citizens who travelled outside the EU ranged from 41% in Denmark to 7% in Greece.
- The top five holiday destinations remain unchanged since last year: Spain was still the most popular destination in 2013, followed by France, Italy, Germany and Austria.
- About four in ten people took at least one holiday where the various parts of their trip were purchased separately – slightly more than those who opted for a package holiday.
- Respondents express a high level of satisfaction with most aspects of their 2013 main holiday.
- Only a minority of respondents who stayed in paid accommodation experienced safety problems during their main 2013 holiday. Moreover, only 4% of respondents who travelled at least once in 2013 registered a complaint during their trip.

Travellers' profiles in 2013

- Seven in ten people went away for at least one night in 2013, a slight decrease since the previous year.
- The proportion of respondents who travelled for a minimum of one night ranged from 90% in Norway to 44% in Turkey.
- Over half of those who travelled were away for a period of 4-13 nights. Half went for a shorter period, while a quarter travelled for two weeks or more.
- More than four in ten people stayed in paid accommodation with more than 20 guests, while a similar proportion stayed with friends or relatives.

Obstacles to going on holiday in 2013

- More than half of respondents who did not go on holiday in 2013 say it was at least partially for financial reasons, and 44% considered it was the main reason.
- Additionally, a fifth of respondents mention personal or private reasons for not going away in 2013.

Holiday plans for 2014

- Over four in ten people say they will not change their 2014 holiday plans because of the economic situation, while a third say they will change their plans but still travel.
- Just one person in ten says they will not go on holiday as a result of the economic situation.
- The proportion of people who intend to go on holiday without changing their plans for economic reasons ranges from 75% in Austria to 10% in Greece.
- Four in ten people who plan to go on holiday in 2014 expect to go away for a period of 4-13 nights.
- A holiday lasting 4-13 nights is the type planned by the most people in 31 out of 35 countries.
- Four in ten respondents plan to spend their main holiday in their own country, and this proportion increases to 50% when considering all the holidays planned (not only the main holiday).
- Three in ten people expect their main holiday to be in the EU, and over four in ten intend to spend at least one of their holidays in a EU country in 2014.
- Finally, one in six respondents plan on spending their main holiday outside the EU, a proportion which rises to a quarter when considering all travels.

I. RESEARCHING AND PLANNING A HOLIDAY

The first chapter of the report examines the research and planning which respondents undertake before going on holiday. They were first asked their reasons for going on holiday in 2013, and why they might choose to return to the same place as in a previous year. The sources of information used for planning a holiday are then discussed, as well as the various means of arranging a holiday, such as via the Internet or a travel agency.

1.1 Reasons for going on holiday in 2013

- Spending time in the sun or at the beach was the main reason for going on holiday in 2013, with more people giving this reason than a year before -

Respondents who travelled at least once for a minimum of four nights during 2013 were asked their main reason for going on holiday, and also their secondary reasons (up to three). Here, these two results are combined for ease of analysis.

Sun/beach was once again the most popular reason for going on holiday in 2013: nearly half (46%) of respondents say that the sun/beach was one of their main reasons, up from 40% who gave this answer in January 2013. About a third (34%, -2 since 2013) mention visiting family/friends/relatives as one of their main reasons, while three in ten people (30%, +4) say that nature (landscapes, mountains, etc.) was one of the main reasons they went on holiday in 2013.

A quarter of respondents (25%, +3) mention culture as one of their main reasons for taking a holiday, closely followed by city trips (23%, +3). Roughly one person in seven (14%, +4) went for a sport-related activity, or for wellness/health/spa treatment (13%, +1). Less than a tenth of respondents (8%, +1) took a holiday to coincide with a specific event, while 13% spontaneously give some other reason (+6).

Q5T. What were your main reasons for going on holiday in 2013?

Base: 50% from the total number of respondents – EU28

(Those who went on a personal travel for a minimum of four consecutive nights during 2013)

At national level, in 24 of the 35 countries covered by the survey, sun/beach is the main reason why people went on holiday last year. People in Slovenia (66%) and Greece (61%) are the most likely to give sun/beach as their main reason for taking a holiday in 2013. Conversely, only 12% of respondents in Malta and 16% in Latvia took a holiday for the sake of the sun/beach.

In seven countries, visiting friends/family is the main reason for going on holiday. This was the reason given most often in Montenegro (47%), France (45%) and Latvia (44%). In contrast, only 15% of people in Slovenia and 21% in Israel went on holiday in 2013 mainly in order to visit friends/family.

In two countries – the Czech Republic (54%) and Israel (41%) – enjoying nature was the main reason for taking a holiday; though not the main reason, it was also relatively widespread in the Netherlands (43%) and in the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (42%). Nature was least important as a reason for going on holiday in Turkey (14%), Ireland (15%), Portugal (18%) and the UK (18%).

In Estonia (41%) and Malta (39%), culture (e.g. religion, gastronomy, the arts, etc.) was the main reason for going on holiday last year, and at least three in ten people mention culture in eight countries. However, just 11% of people in Greece and 13% in Poland went on holiday for cultural reasons.

Taking a city trip was the main reason for going on holiday for respondents in Lithuania (38%); this was also popular in Hungary (35%) and Poland (34%). Conversely, going on city trips was mentioned least in Bulgaria (6%) and Montenegro (8%).

Relatively high proportions of people in Austria (25%), the Czech Republic (25%), Germany (20%) and Luxembourg (20%) went on holiday last year for sports-related activities, although in most countries relatively few people took a holiday to practice sports.

In the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, an exceptionally high proportion of people – 53% – went on holiday for wellness/spa/health treatment, as did relatively high proportions in Iceland (38%) and Latvia (36%). As with sports, though, this was relatively uncommon in most countries.

Finally, taking a holiday in order to participate in a specific event (sports, festival, etc.) is a relatively marginal reason, except in Iceland (18%).

A review of the socio-demographic data shows that:

- Results do not vary much between men and women. The main differences are that women are more likely to mention visiting family/friends or relatives as a main reason for going on holiday (38% vs. 31%), whereas men are more likely to go on holiday for sport-related activities (17% vs. 11% of women).
- Age seems to influence the reasons to go on holiday. Respondents aged 55 and over are more likely to mention nature (35%) as their main reason, compared with 15-24 year-olds (21%). Conversely, they are the least likely to go on holiday for the sun/beach (36% vs. 48%-53% for the other age groups). Younger respondents are the most likely to have gone on holiday to visit family/friends (38% of 15-24 year-olds and 40% of the 25-39 age group vs. 30% of 40-54 year-olds and 33% of people aged 55 and over).
- Respondents who completed their education aged 20 and over are the most likely to mention nature (34% vs. 29% of those who left school at 15 or under), culture (29% vs. 16%) and city trips (26% vs. 16%) among their main reasons for going on holiday.
- Employees (53%) are the most likely to mention sun/beach, while people who are not working (40%) are the least likely to give this reason.

1.2 Respondents' reasons for returning to the same place for a holiday

– The natural features of the destination are the main reason for wanting to return to the same place for a holiday –

Moving on from the discussion about the reasons for going on holiday, all respondents were then asked why they might return to the same place for their holidays. They were asked to give the main reason for doing this, and then up to three others from a list of seven likely factors. These results are combined here for ease of analysis.

Nearly half the respondents (46%) say that the natural features of a holiday destination would persuade them to go back for another holiday – a slight increase from the 44% who said this in the previous survey. The quality of accommodation is the next most significant factor (33%, +2), followed by cultural and historical attractions (30%, +4). Around a quarter of people say that the general level of prices (26%, no change), the quality of the activities or services available (24%, +4), and how tourists are welcomed (23%, +1) would make them go back to the same place. However, only 6% of people (-1) mention accessible facilities for people with special needs, while 10% (+4) spontaneously give other reasons, and 4% (no change) say spontaneously that they never go to the same place twice.

Q8T. Which of the following would make you go back to the same place for a holiday?

Base: Total number of respondents – EU28

In all but three countries, natural features such as the landscape and the weather are the most important reason to return to the same place for another holiday. This is particularly true for respondents in the Czech Republic (61%), the Netherlands (56%) and Austria (51%). The three exceptions, where natural features are not the most important reason to return to a holiday destination, are Israel (29%), Serbia (37%) and Malta (38%).

In the UK (41%, equal with natural features) and Israel (33%), the quality of the accommodation is seen as the main reason to return to the same place for another holiday; Belgium has the highest proportion of respondents (43%) who mention this as a factor. In contrast, only 16% of people in Norway and 19% in both Iceland and Malta regard the quality of accommodation as a reason to go back to the same place for a holiday.

Respondents in Malta (39%) are the most likely to say that cultural and historical attractions would persuade them to go back to the same place for a holiday, with relatively high proportions of people also mentioning this in Hungary and Luxembourg (both 38%). Portugal (22%), Greece (23%) and Romania (23%) have the lowest proportion of respondents who regard cultural and historical attractions as a significant factor.

In Serbia (39%), the general level of prices is the top answer; 37% of people in Greece and 36% in Finland also mention prices. At the other end of the scale, prices are considered least important by people in Norway (16%) and Malta (18%) in their decision to go back to the same destination.

Respondents in Ireland (40%) and Finland (37%) are the most likely to mention the quality of activities or services as a reason to go back to the same place. Conversely, only 14% people in the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Norway and Portugal give this answer.

A third of people in Latvia (33%), and 28% in Austria, France and Belgium, think that the way in which tourists are welcomed is a reason for going back to the same place for a holiday. However, this is mentioned by just 12% of people in both Estonia and Turkey.

Belgium (11%) and Turkey (10%) are the only countries where at least a tenth of respondents say that accessible facilities for people with special needs is an important consideration.

A review of the socio-demographic data shows that:

- Respondents aged 55 and over are the least likely to be persuaded to return to the same place for a holiday by the following factors: the quality of the accommodation (28% vs. 34-36% for other age groups), the general level of prices (19% vs. 28-32%), the way in which tourists are welcomed (18% vs. 23-27%) or the quality of activities/services (17% vs. 24-34%).
- Respondents with a higher level of education are more likely to say that they would go back to the same destination for a holiday because of its natural features (50% vs. 36% of people who left school aged 15 or under). They are also more likely to mention a range of other factors, including cultural and historical attractions (35% vs. 18%).
- Employees (38%) and self-employed people (34%) are more likely than manual workers and people not working (both 29%) to regard the quality of the accommodation as important. The results are similar for other factors: for example, 33% of employees, compared to 25% of manual workers, mention cultural and historical attractions.

1.3 Most-used sources of information for planning a holiday

- A majority of people take personal recommendations into account when planning their holiday -

All respondents were asked which sources of information they considered most important when making decisions about their travel plans. Up to three answers were allowed. Over half (56%) mention the recommendations of friends, colleagues or relatives, while 46% mention Internet websites. One third (33%) of respondents consider personal experience to be important, while roughly one fifth (19%) say travel agencies and tourism offices were important in their decision-making, followed by free catalogues and brochures (11%). Less than one in ten mentioned paid-for guidebooks and magazines (7%), social media sites (7%) and newspapers, radio or TV (8%).

These results are very similar to the last wave of the survey, with differences of no more than 1 or 2 percentage points.

Q10. Of the following information sources, which do you consider to be the most important when you make a decision about your travel plans?

EU28

Base: Total number of respondents – EU28

At national level, the recommendations of friends, colleagues or relatives are the most important sources of information for respondents in 25 countries, in particular Latvia (72%), Ireland (67%) and the Czech Republic (66%). However, fewer than half of the respondents from Cyprus (34%), Malta (40%) and the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (45%) mentioned recommendations from friends, family or colleagues as important when making their travel plans.

Internet websites are the most important sources of information for respondents in nine countries, led by Finland (66%), the Netherlands (61%) and Luxembourg (57%). At the other end of the scale, fewer than a quarter of respondents in the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (17%) and Romania (23%) considered Internet websites an important source.

Personal experience is the most important source of information for respondents in the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (46%), and is also considered relatively important in the Czech Republic (45%) and Montenegro (41%). Conversely, fewer than a quarter consider personal experience important in Turkey (20%), Malta (21%) and Cyprus (23%).

Almost three in ten respondents in Spain (29%) think that travel agencies or tourism offices are important sources of information, followed closely by people in Austria (27%) and Belgium (26%). In contrast, only 5% of respondents in Norway and 7% in Bulgaria say this is important.

Respondents in Luxembourg (21%) are most likely to use free catalogues and brochures, whereas very few respondents do so in Romania, Estonia, Montenegro, and Serbia (4% in all these countries).

Newspaper, radio or TV are relatively important sources for respondents in Finland (13%) and Latvia (12%); people in Austria and Germany (both 11%) are the most likely to mention paid-for guidebooks or magazines; and social media sites are relatively significant sources for respondents in Sweden (14%) and Norway (13%).

A review of the socio-demographic data shows that:

- Both men and women mention recommendations of friends, family or colleagues as the most important information source when making decisions about travel plans, though women are slightly more likely to do so (58% vs. 54%), while men are more likely to mention Internet websites (49% vs. 42%). Women are also more likely to mention travel agencies (22% vs. 17% for men).
- The younger the respondents, the more likely they are to regard recommendations from friends, colleagues or relatives as important: 67% of 15-24 year-olds mention this, compared to 44% of those aged 55 and over. Unsurprisingly, the youngest respondents are also the most likely to mention social media sites (15% vs. 3% of people aged 55 and over). Respondents aged 55 and over are much less likely than younger respondents to mention Internet websites (28% vs. 52%-59% for other age groups), but are the most likely to mention tourism offices/travel agencies (22% vs. 16% of 25-39 year-olds).
- Respondents who left school aged 15 or under are less likely than those who finished their education aged 20 and over to mention personal experience (25% vs. 35%) or recommendations from friends, colleagues or relatives (42% vs. 60%), and Internet websites (22% vs. 56%). They are, however, the most likely to mention tourism offices or travel agencies (24% vs. 17%).
- Employees and self-employed respondents (35%) are the most likely to say that personal experience is important when making decisions about travel plans, while manual workers (28%) are the least likely to say this. Employees are also the most likely to mention both recommendations from friends, colleagues or relatives (64% vs. 50% of people not working), and Internet websites (60% vs. 35% of people not working).

1.4 How respondents arranged their holidays in 2013

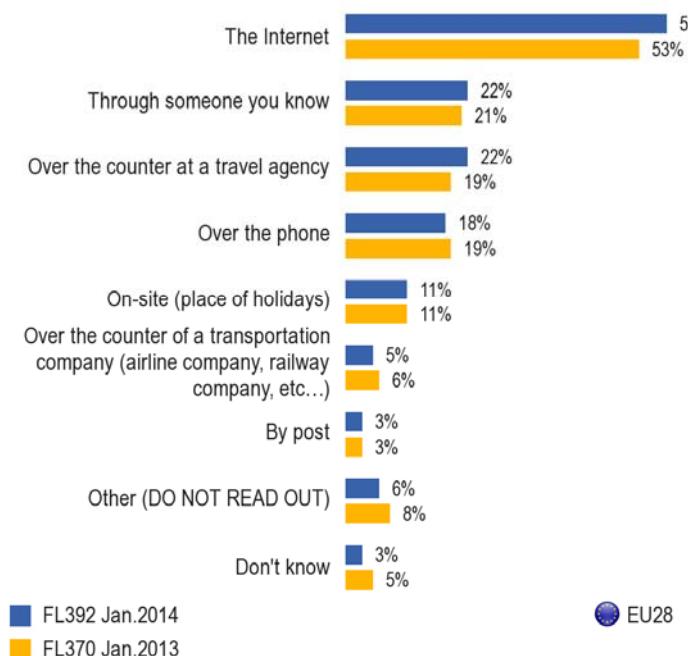

– The Internet is by far the most common way of booking a holiday, and its use for this purpose is still growing –

For those people who travelled at least once in 2013 for a minimum of four nights, the next question was how they arranged their holiday. They were given a list of seven likely options, and multiple answers were permitted.

The Internet (58%) was by far the most common way of organising a holiday, with an increase of +5 compared with last year.

Roughly a fifth of respondents organised their holiday through someone they knew (22%, +1), over the counter at a travel agency (22%, +3), or over the phone (18%, -1). A tenth (11%, no change) arranged their holiday on-site, while relatively few people organised their trip over the counter of a transport company (5%, -1) or by post (3%, no change).

Q7. Did you arrange your holiday in 2013 using any of the following methods?

Base: 50% from the total number of respondents – EU28

(Those who went on a personal travel for a minimum of four consecutive nights during 2013)

The Internet was the main method used to arrange holidays in 2013 in 27 of the 28 EU Member States – the exception being Croatia – and in four of the seven non-EU countries, the exceptions being Montenegro, the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Serbia. Use of the Internet was especially widespread in Norway (80%), Ireland (78%) and Denmark (77%). It was used least for arranging holidays in Montenegro (19%) and the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (21%).

Arranging holidays over the counter at a travel agency is the method most often used by respondents in Serbia (29%). Across all countries, Austria (35%) has the highest proportion of respondents who booked their holiday in this way.

In Croatia (31%) and Montenegro (24%), arranging a holiday through someone you know was the most common approach. A high proportion of people also did this in Latvia (42%).

Over a quarter of respondents in Finland (28%) and Poland (26%) arranged their holiday over the phone. In the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (35%), booking on site was the most common way of organising a holiday, with over a fifth of people also doing so in Belgium and Latvia (both 21%).

Booking a holiday over the counter at a transport company was relatively rare in most countries, although 19% of people did so in both Finland and Latvia.

Only minor differences can be observed in socio-demographic terms:

- Men are somewhat more likely than women to have used the Internet to arrange their holiday (61% to 56%).
- Respondents aged 25-39 (69%) are the most likely to have booked a holiday via the Internet, while those aged 55 and over (45%) are the least likely to have done so. People in the oldest age group are instead the most likely to have booked over the counter at a travel agency (27% vs. 16% of 25-39 year-olds).
- While 66% of people who completed their education aged 20 and over used the Internet to arrange their holiday, only 36% of those who left school aged 15 or under did so. People in the latter group were more likely to have booked over the counter at a travel agency than those aged 20 and over (27% vs. 19%).
- Roughly seven in ten employees (69%) booked via the Internet, whereas only 47% of people who are not working did so.

II. THE HOLIDAY EXPERIENCE

This second chapter of the report takes a more detailed look at the holidays taken by respondents in 2013. They were first asked where they went on holiday, and then what type of holiday they chose. They were also asked how satisfied they were with their experience, and whether they encountered any safety issues at their accommodation. Finally, the respondents were asked whether they made any kind of complaint during their holiday, and if so what the complaint was about.

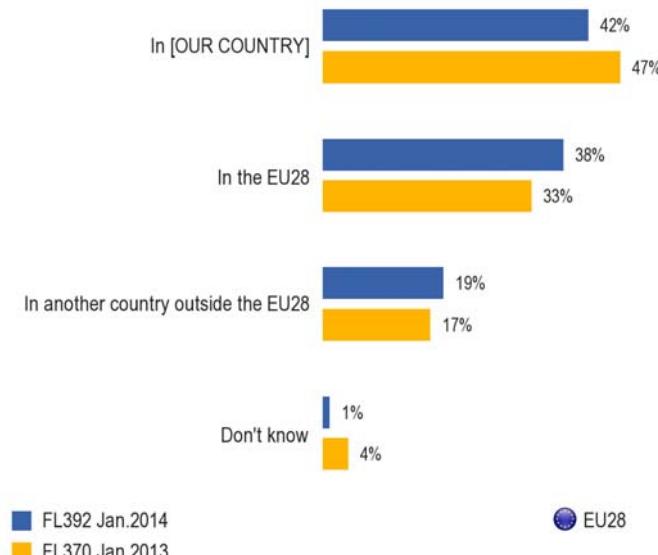

2.1 Destinations for holidays taken in 2013

– Though still a majority, the proportion of respondents who holidayed in their own country in 2013 decreased since last year –

All the respondents who went on holiday in 2013 for a minimum of four nights were asked two questions about these holidays. They were asked where they went for their main holiday of at least four consecutive nights, and then which other countries they went to for any other holidays of at least four consecutive nights.

The chart below shows the results for respondents' main holiday³. Four in ten respondents (42%) went on holiday in their own country, down from the 47% who gave this answer in the previous wave of the survey. Nearly four in ten people (38%) went on holiday somewhere in the EU, which represents an increase of +5 since last year⁴, while roughly a fifth (19%, +2) took a holiday in a country outside the EU28.

Q4A. To which country did you go for your main holiday in 2013? By 'main holiday' we mean the holiday that was the most important for you in 2013.

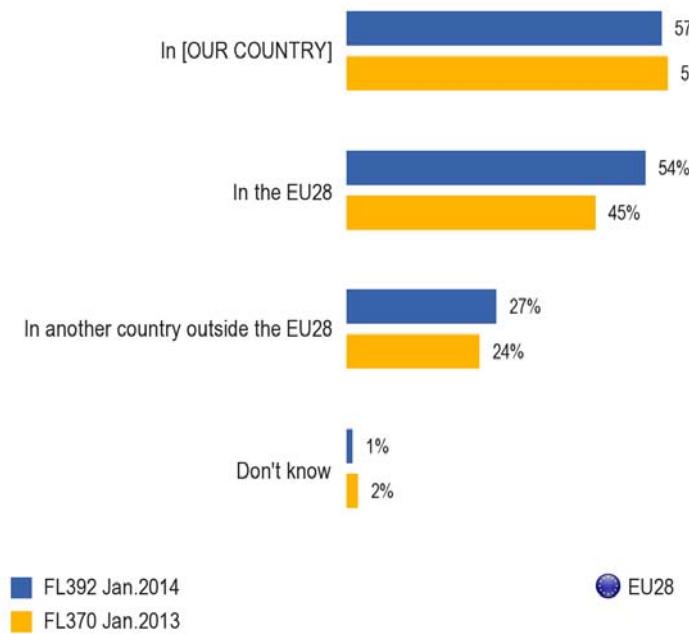

Base: 50% from the total number of respondents – EU28
 (Those who went on a personal travel for a minimum of four consecutive nights during 2013)

³ The "main holiday" was described to respondents as "the holiday that was most important for you in 2013".

⁴ The results of the previous wave (FL370 Jan 2013) were recalculated to include Croatia in the category "In the EU28". This naturally leads to slight differences compared to the results for "In the EU27" presented in last year's report.

The following chart combines the respondents' main holidays with any other holidays they may have taken in 2013. A majority of respondents (57%, -1) say they went on holiday in their own country in 2013, while a similar proportion holidayed in an EU country⁵ (54%, +9). Over a quarter (27%, +3) went somewhere outside the EU.

Q4T. To which countries did you go on holidays in 2013?

Base: 50% from the total number of respondents – EU28

(Those who went on a personal travel for a minimum of four consecutive nights during 2013)

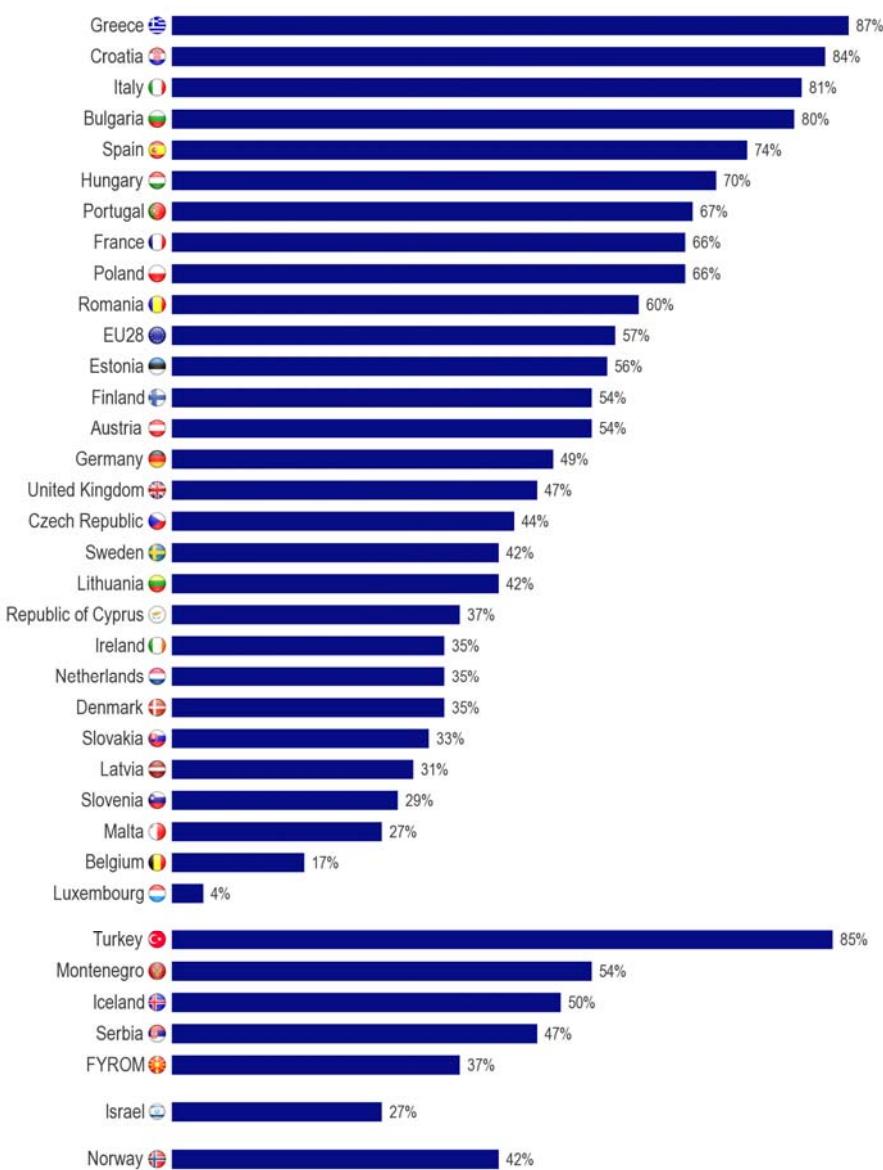

Looking at these results in a different way, by combining the "in our country" response with the "in the EU" responses for EU28 Members States, shows that a vast majority (92%) of respondents who went on holiday for at least four nights went somewhere within the EU, either in their own country or in another Member State. This is a 3 pp increase since last year (89%)⁵, when including Croatia in the category "In the EU28" for both years.

⁵ The results of the previous wave (FL370 Jan 2013) were recalculated to include Croatia in the category "In the EU28". This naturally leads to slight differences compared to the results for "In the EU27" presented in last year's report.

At national level – and looking here at the combined answers and not only the main holiday – the data shows that respondents in Greece (87%) were the most likely to have taken a holiday in their own country, followed by those in Turkey (85%), Croatia (84%), Italy (81%) and Bulgaria (80%). Overall, in 17 of the 35 countries, at least 50% of respondents spent a holiday in their country of residence. However, it is noticeable that relatively few people took a domestic holiday in some of the EU's smaller countries, such as in Luxembourg (4%) and Belgium (17%).

Question: Q4T. To which countries did you go for your holidays in 2013?

Answers: In [OUR COUNTRY]

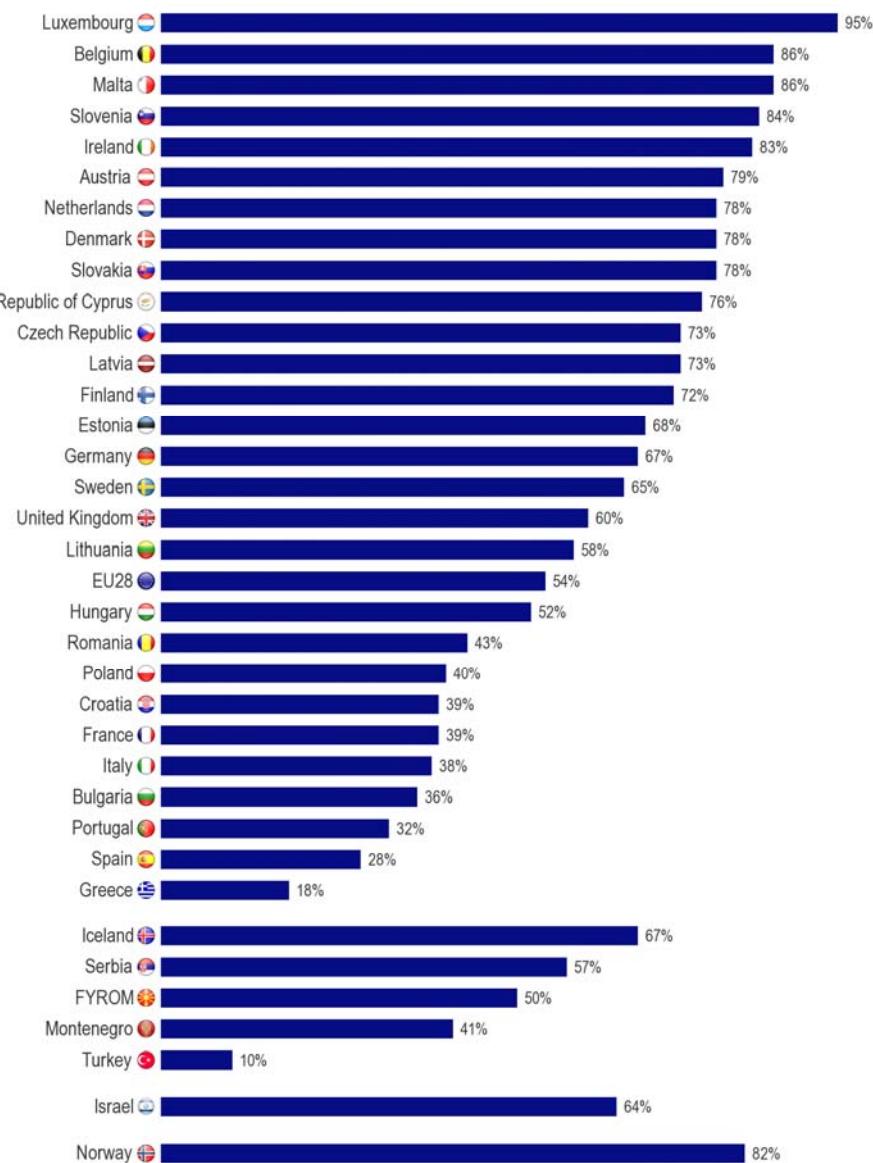

Base: 47% from the total number of respondents – all surveyed countries

(Those who went on a personal travel for a minimum of four consecutive nights during 2013)

In 19 of the 28 EU countries, and five of the non-EU countries, at least half the respondents went on a holiday within the EU. This was especially common in Luxembourg (95%), Belgium (86%) and Malta (86%). However, only 10% of people in Turkey and 18% in Greece went to an EU country for their holiday last year.

Question: Q4T. To which countries did you go for your holidays in 2013?

Answers: In the EU28

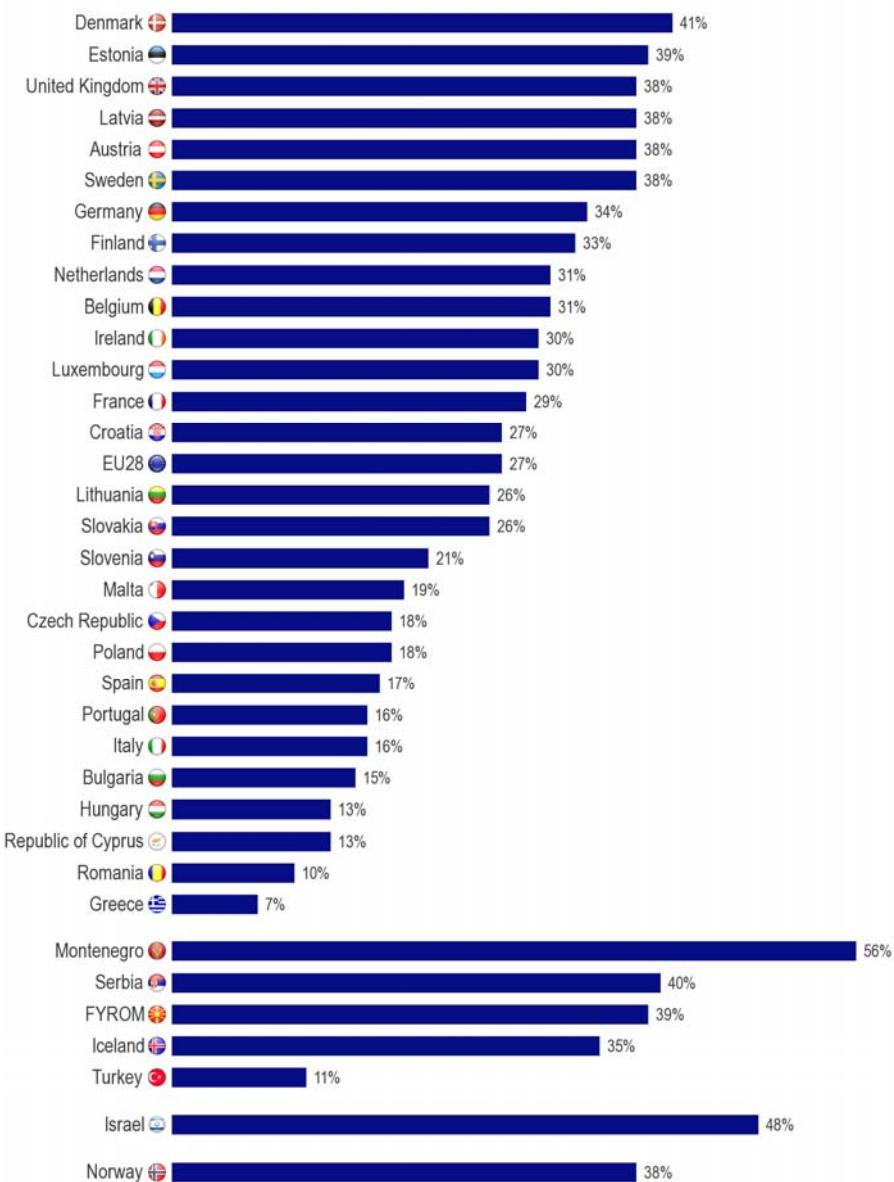

Base: 47% from the total number of respondents – all surveyed countries

(Those who went on a personal travel for a minimum of four consecutive nights during 2013)

Unsurprisingly, holidaying in a country outside the EU was most common among respondents from the non-EU countries covered by the survey. In these countries, at least four in ten people went to a non-EU destination in Montenegro (56%), Israel (48%) and Serbia (40%). Of the EU Member States, Denmark (41%) and Estonia (39%) had the highest proportions of respondents who visited a non-EU country, and at least three in ten people did so in 12 EU countries. Holidaying outside the EU was least popular with people in Greece (7%) and Romania (10%).

Question: Q4T. To which countries did you go for your holidays in 2013?

Answers: In another country outside the EU28

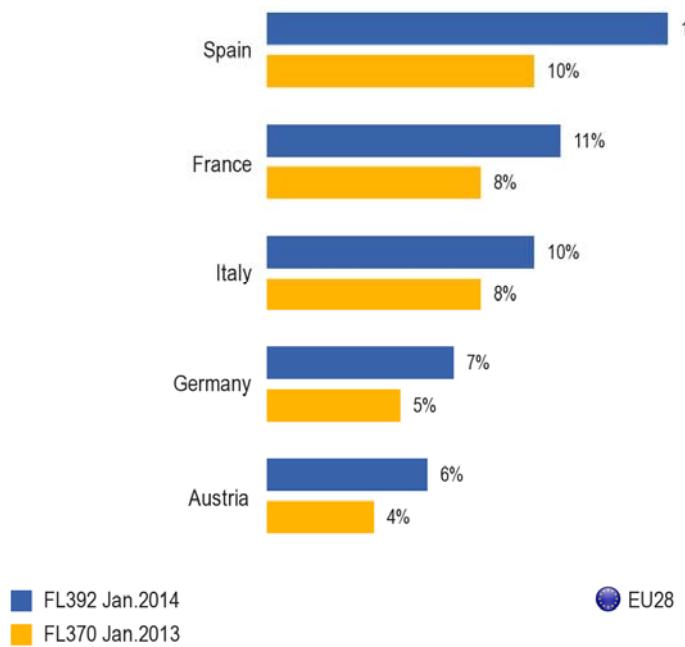

Base: 47% from the total number of respondents – all surveyed countries

(Those who went on a personal travel for a minimum of four consecutive nights during 2013)

The top five holiday destinations remain unchanged since last year: Spain was still the most popular destination in 2013, being visited by 15% of respondents, up from 10% a year earlier. Next came France (11%, +3), Italy (10%, +2), Germany (7%, +2) and Austria (6%, +2).

Q4T. Top 5 destinations for holidays taken in 2013

Base: 50% from the total number of respondents – EU28

(Those who went on a personal travel for a minimum of four consecutive nights during 2013)

According to the socio-demographic results:

- Respondents holidaying in their own country are most likely to be aged 55 and over (61% vs. 54-56% for other age groups), to have left school aged 15 or under (65% vs. 53-58% for those with longer educational experience) and to be not working (61% compared to 51% of self-employed respondents).
- Respondents holidaying in an EU country are more often aged 15-24 (59% vs. 51% of people aged 55 and over), have completed their education aged 20 and over (56% vs. 42% who left school aged 15 or under), or are self-employed or employees (57% vs. 50% of people in other occupations).
- Respondents who completed their education aged 20 and over are more likely than those who left school aged 15 or under to have holidayed in a country outside the EU28 (30% vs. 21%).

2.2 Types of holiday taken in 2013

– Booking the various parts of a holiday separately remains more popular among Europeans than a package holiday –

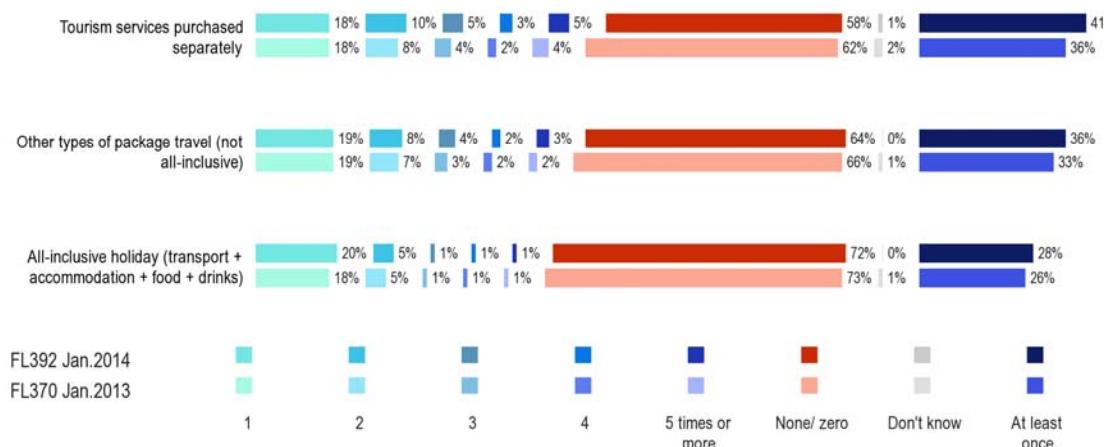

After discussing where they went on holiday, respondents who travelled at least once in 2013 for a minimum of four nights were then asked the types of holiday they went on, and the number of times they went on those kinds of holiday. Specifically, they were asked if they had been on any of three types of holiday: all-inclusive; a package holiday that was not all-inclusive; or a holiday for which the various tourism services were purchased separately.

Four in ten respondents (41%, +5 compared with 2013) went on at least one holiday where the various parts of their trip were purchased separately. This is a 5-point increase since the 2013 survey. Of those 41%, 18% went on this type of holiday only once, 10% went twice, 5% three times, 3% four times, and 5% five times or more. Conversely, nearly six in ten people (58%) who went on a holiday last year did not opt for this kind of arrangement.

Over a third of people (36%, +3 compared with 2013) went on a package holiday that was not all-inclusive. Of those 36%, 19% went on this type of holiday only once, 8% went twice, 4% three times, 2% four times, and 3% five times or more. About two-thirds of respondents (64%) who went on a holiday last year did not take this kind of holiday.

More than a quarter of the respondents (28%, +2 compared with 2013) went on an all-inclusive holiday. Most did so only once (20%) or twice (5%). Over seven in ten people (72%) who took a holiday in 2013 did not take an all-inclusive trip.

Q6. In 2013, how many times did you go on any of the following types of holiday?

Base: 50% from the total number of respondents – EU28

(Those who went on a personal travel for a minimum of four consecutive nights during 2013)

People in Norway (69%), Denmark (65%), and Ireland (62%) are the most likely to have gone on at least one holiday where the various tourism services were purchased separately. In contrast, fewest people opted for this kind of holiday in Hungary (16%), Portugal (19%) and Turkey (21%).

The proportion of respondents who went on this kind of holiday increased in most countries compared with the 2013 wave, with especially large increases in Austria (60%, +21), Slovakia (49%, +15), Ireland (62%, +13), Serbia (32%, +13), and Denmark (65%, +12). Conversely, the proportion of people who booked their tourism services separately declined most significantly in Italy (29%, -10) and Croatia (31%, -6).

A holiday where the package was not all-inclusive was most popular in Slovakia (64%), Israel (60%) and Belgium (58%). The countries where fewest respondents chose this kind of holiday are Greece (20%), Croatia (22%) and Estonia (26%).

Again, many countries saw a significant rise in the proportion of respondents who took at least one non-inclusive package holiday, most strikingly in Slovakia (64%, +18), the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (43%, +17), the Czech Republic (54%, +14) and Denmark (37%, +12). Lithuania (34%, -4) and Portugal (35%, -4) were the only countries recording significant decreases in the proportion of respondents who took at least one non-inclusive package holiday.

Respondents in Belgium and Turkey (42%) were the most likely to have taken an all-inclusive holiday in 2013, followed by those in Israel (38%) and Spain (37%). All-inclusive holidays were least common in Croatia and Greece (both 16%).

Most countries registered an increase in the proportion of people who went on an all-inclusive holiday in 2013, with Turkey (42%, +14) and Slovenia (34%, +8) experiencing the biggest increases. There were also some noticeable declines, such as in Latvia (31%, -8) and Greece (16%, -7).

*FL370 (Jan.2013) was not conducted in Montenegro

Base: 47% from the total number of respondents – all surveyed countries

(Those who went on a personal travel for a minimum of four consecutive nights during 2013)

A review of the socio-demographic data shows that:

- Respondents aged 15-24 and 55 and over (both 31%) were the most likely to have been on an all-inclusive holiday in 2013, while 25-39 year-olds (23%) were the least likely to have done so. Additionally, 15-24 year-olds were the most likely to have gone on a holiday where the services were purchased separately, whereas people aged 55 and over were the least likely (45% vs. 35%).
- Respondents who completed their education aged 20 and over were more likely than those who left school aged 15 or under to have purchased tourism services separately (46% vs. 23%) or to have bought a package that was not all-inclusive (37% vs. 29%). In contrast, all-inclusive packages are most popular among those with a lower level of education (34% of those who left school aged 15 or under vs. 25% who completed their education aged 20 and over).
- Self-employed respondents (48%) and employees (45%) were more likely than manual workers (34%) and those who are not working (35%) to have booked tourism services separately.

2.3 Satisfaction with the main holiday taken in 2013

- Respondents express a high level of satisfaction with most aspects of their main holiday -

The focus now shifts to the respondent's satisfaction with certain aspects of their main holiday in 2013.

The results show that the overall level of satisfaction was very high for six of the seven aspects under discussion. Nearly all respondents (96%) were satisfied with the natural features, such as the landscape and weather conditions, on their main holiday. Seven in ten (71%) were very satisfied with this aspect of their trip, while 25% were fairly satisfied. There was a notable increase (+5) in the number of people who were very satisfied, while overall satisfaction has increased slightly (+1) since 2013.

A similarly high proportion of respondents (95%) were satisfied with the safety of their accommodation: 66% were very satisfied and 29% were fairly satisfied⁶.

The same proportion of people (95%) say they were satisfied with the quality of their accommodation, with 61% being very satisfied and 34% fairly satisfied. Again, there was an increase (+4) in the number who were very satisfied, and in the overall level of satisfaction (+3).

Nearly nine in ten people (88%) were satisfied with the quality of activities/services that were available: 47% were very satisfied and 41% were fairly satisfied. Just 6% were not satisfied with this element of their holiday. There was a rise in the proportion of respondents who were very satisfied (+5), and in overall satisfaction (+3).

When it comes to the general level of prices, 87% of respondents express satisfaction, although most were fairly satisfied (51%) rather than very satisfied (36%). Almost a tenth (9%) were not satisfied. Once again, there was an increase both in the proportion of respondents saying they were very satisfied (+6), and in the overall level of satisfaction (+4) with prices.

A very large majority of people (86%) also felt satisfied with the way tourists were welcomed, with 51% very satisfied and 35% fairly satisfied. Only 5% expressed dissatisfaction with this aspect of their holiday. Compared with 2013, the proportion of respondents saying they were very satisfied increased by 3 points, while the overall level of satisfaction rose by 1 point.

Satisfaction with the availability of accessible facilities for people with special needs was noticeably lower than for the other six aspects of the respondents' holidays. Less than half (47%) said that they were satisfied, with 21% very satisfied and 26% fairly satisfied. However, this is probably explained by the fact that a large proportion (42%, +3) were unable to give an answer on this item. Only 11% said they were not satisfied.

⁶ This question was not asked in previous waves of the survey.

Q9A. Thinking about your main holiday in 2013, how satisfied were you with...? By 'main holiday' we mean the holiday that was the most important for you in 2013.

Base: 50% from the total number of respondents – EU28

(Those who went on a personal travel for a minimum of four consecutive nights during 2013)

In all but two of the 35 countries covered by the survey, at least nine in ten respondents said they were satisfied with the natural features of their main holiday destination. The two exceptions were Turkey (88%) and Latvia (89%). Most countries recorded small increases in satisfaction, although relatively large rises were seen in Hungary (98%, +9), Slovakia (95%, +7), and Bulgaria (93%, +5).

Similarly, in all but five countries, at least nine in ten people were satisfied with the safety of their accommodation. Even in the remaining countries – Lithuania (89%), Cyprus (88%), Estonia (88%), Turkey (86%) and Greece (80%) – the level of satisfaction was close to the 90% mark.

Respondents in most countries were also very satisfied with the quality of the accommodation. In only four countries did fewer than 90% of respondents express satisfaction with this aspect: Lithuania (89%), Cyprus (84%), Turkey (83%) and Greece (80%). Again, there was increased satisfaction in most countries, with Bulgaria (92%, +13), Slovakia (95%, +8) and Turkey (83%, +8) recording the largest increases.

In 15 countries, at least nine in ten people were satisfied with the quality of activities and services during their main holiday. Respondents in Ireland and Malta (both 94%) were especially satisfied, while Turkey (72%) and Greece (74%) were at the other end of the scale. Estonia (84%, +10), Latvia (91%, +8) and Romania (89%, +8) recorded the biggest increases in satisfaction compared with the 2013 survey, while Lithuania (84%, -6) saw the only significant decline.

In nine countries, at least nine in ten people were satisfied with the general level of prices on their main holiday, with the highest levels in Belgium (94%), Ireland (92%), Finland (92%), Slovenia (92%) and the UK (92%). However, less than seven in ten people in three countries – Turkey (64%), Greece (66%) and Croatia (69%) – said they were satisfied with the prices. There was an increase in satisfaction with the general level of prices in almost all countries, led by Bulgaria (80%, +17), Estonia (81%, +13), Romania (83%, +11) and Hungary (86%, +10).

In ten countries, at least 90% of respondents say they were satisfied with the way tourists were welcomed on their main holiday last year. The highest levels of satisfaction were recorded in Ireland (93%), Belgium (92%), Slovenia (92%) and the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (92%), and the lowest in Turkey (67%) and Greece (73%). There was little change on this issue in most countries, although relatively large increases in satisfaction were recorded in Bulgaria (87%, +13), Estonia (82%, +11) and Slovakia (91%, +8). Greece (73%, -7) saw the only substantial decline.

There was more variation between countries on the question of whether there were accessible facilities for people with special needs. At one end of the scale, at least 60% of people expressed their satisfaction in the five following countries: Portugal (67%), Malta (66%), Belgium (63%), Slovenia (61%) and the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (60%). At the other end, there was relatively little satisfaction among people in Estonia (16%) and Sweden (26%). Compared with January 2013, satisfaction increased markedly in Malta (66%, +15), Norway (47%, +12) and Bulgaria (37%, +10), while falling substantially in Romania (34%, -15), the Netherlands (37%, -13) and Serbia (39%, -12).

(Those who went on a personal travel for a minimum of four consecutive nights during 2013)

Few socio-demographic variations are notable on this question, the only exceptions being that people aged 55 and over are more likely than 15-24 year-olds to be very satisfied with the quality of their accommodation (65% vs. 53%) and the safety of their accommodation (69% vs. 59%), while 40-54 year-olds are more likely to be very satisfied with the natural features of their destination (75% vs. 60% of 15-24 year-olds).

Q9A Thinking about your main holiday in 2013, how satisfied were you with...? By 'main holiday' we mean the holiday that was the most important for you in 2013.

2.4 Safety issues encountered during the main holiday in 2013

- Only a minority of respondents experienced safety problems with paid accommodation during their main holiday -

The vast majority of respondents (92%) did not experience any safety issues when using paid accommodation during their main holiday in 2013. Of the 6% that did, the most common experience was food poisoning or sickness (2%), followed by a slip, trip or fall (1%) and swimming pool incidents (1%).

Q9B. Did you or any of your party experience any of the following safety issues while using paid accommodation during your main holiday in 2013?

EU28

Base: 45% from the total number of respondents – EU28

(Those who stayed in paid accommodation in 2013)

Due to the limited proportion of respondents who experienced a safety issue, national results are based on a very limited sample size. Thus, country results are not presented in this report.

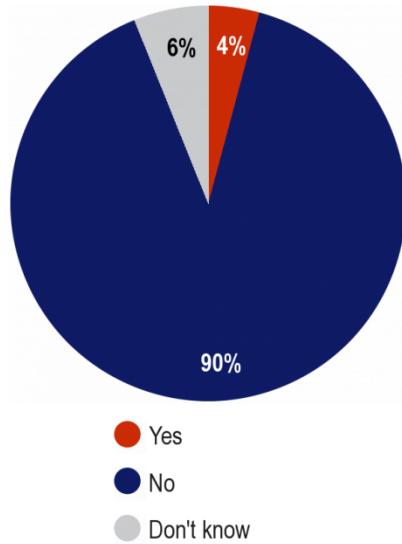

There were no significant socio-demographic variations for this question.

2.5 Complaints registered during a holiday in 2013

- Roughly one person in twenty registered a complaint during their holiday -

Nine in 10 respondents who travelled at least once in 2013 (90%) did not register a formal complaint about any service provided during their holiday in 2013. Only 4% did register a formal complaint, while 6% were unable to answer.

Q9C. Did you register a formal complaint about any service provided during your holiday in 2013?

EU28

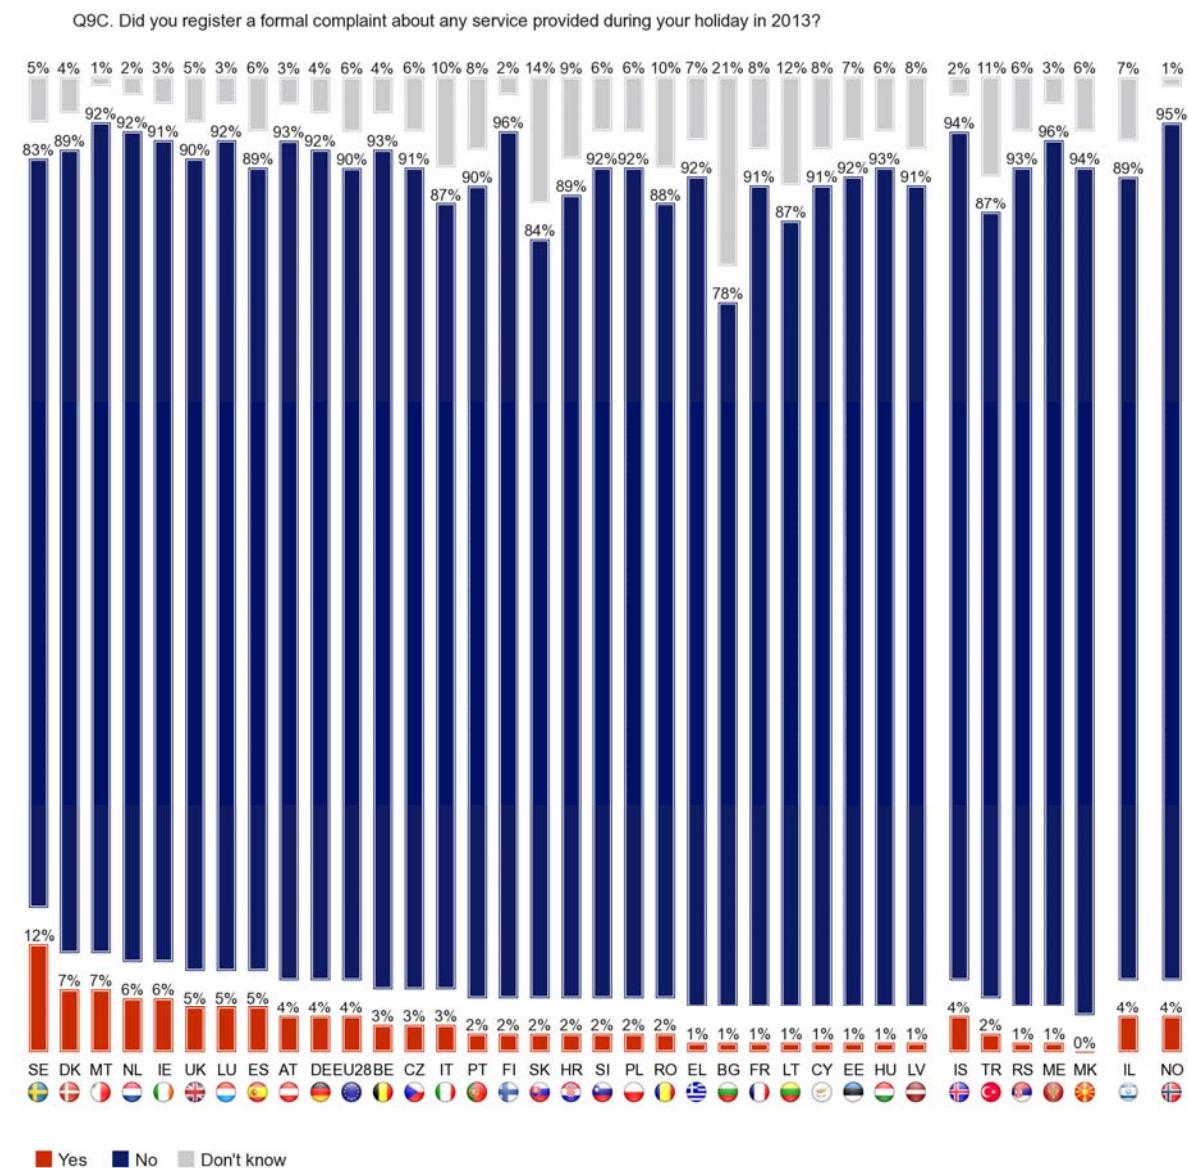

Base: 70% from the total number of respondents – EU28

(Those who travelled for a minimum of one night in 2013)

More than one in ten respondents in Sweden (12%) registered a formal complaint, followed by 7% in both Denmark and Malta.

In 15 EU Member States and 4 non-EU countries, less than 3% of respondents registered a formal complaint about any service provided during their holiday.

In Bulgaria, a relatively high proportion of respondents - 21% - said they didn't know whether they had registered a complaint.

Base: 69% from the total number of respondents – all surveyed countries

(Those who travelled for a minimum of one night in 2013)

Once again, no significant socio-demographic variations can be observed.

Those individuals who said they registered a complaint were then asked what they complained about.

Most formal complaints concerned the accommodation (41%), followed by transport (22%), restaurants (17%) and leisure activities (8%).

Q9D. For which of the following services did you register a formal complaint?

EU28

Base: 2% from the total number of respondents – EU28

(Those who registered a formal complaint in 2013)

Due to the small proportion of respondents who registered a formal complaint, national results are based on a very limited sample size. Thus, country results are not presented in this report.

According to the socio-demographic data:

- Women were more likely than men to have registered complaints about accommodation (44% vs. 37%) and leisure activities (11% vs. 5%), whereas men were more likely to have registered complaints about transport (25% vs. 19%).
- Respondents in the 40-54 age group (46%) were the most likely to complain about accommodation, while those aged 55 and over (36%) were the least likely to do so. Restaurants were a source of complaint for almost one in four respondents aged 25-39 (23%), but just 13% for those aged 55 and over.
- Employees (44%) were the most likely to complain about accommodation, while manual workers (26%) were the least likely to do so. However, manual workers were the most inclined to complain about restaurants (27% vs. 10% of self-employed people).

III. TRAVELLERS' PROFILES IN 2013

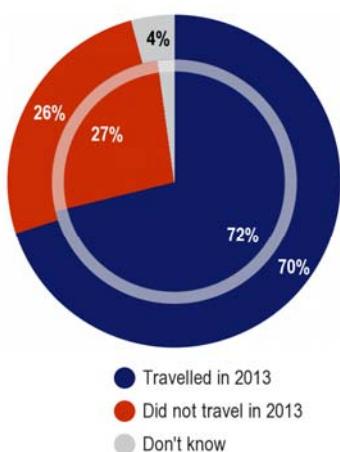

The third chapter of the report focuses on the profile of the travellers themselves. In this section, the respondents were first asked whether they travelled in 2013 for personal or professional reasons. Those who travelled for personal reasons were then asked about the duration of their trip – whether it was a short break, or a longer holiday.

3.1 Proportion of respondents who travelled in 2013

– Seven in ten Europeans travelled away from home at least once in 2013 –

All respondents were asked how often they travelled for professional or personal reasons in 2013, on occasions when they were away from home for a minimum of one night. Overall, seven in ten people (70%) travelled at least once in 2013, a slight decrease (-2) since last year's survey. Conversely, a quarter of respondents (26%, -1) had not travelled for at least one night in 2013.

Q1. During 2013, how many times did you travel for professional or personal reasons where you were away from home for a minimum of one night?

Inner pie : FL370 Jan.2013

Outer pie : FL392 Jan.2014

EU28

Base: Total number of respondents – EU28

Turkey is the only country where a relative majority of respondents did not travel at least once in 2013: 47% did not travel, compared with 44% who did. In all other countries, a majority of respondents spent at least one night away from home. Respondents in Norway (90%), Austria (85%), Iceland (85%), Ireland (85%) and Sweden (85%) travelled the most, while, after Turkey, respondents in Hungary (54%), Lithuania (55%), Romania (55%) and the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (55%) travelled least.

The proportion of respondents who travelled at least once increased the most in Serbia (66%, +8) and Estonia (73%, +6), while declining the most in France (64%, -11), Slovakia (60%, -11), Finland (76%, -7) and Iceland (85%, -7).

Base: Total number of respondents – all surveyed countries

The chart below shows the very even distribution of the number of times EU28 respondents travelled in 2013. There was also very little change compared with 2012. 14% of respondents said that they travelled once, 13% travelled twice, 10% three times, 13% four or five times, 11% six to ten times, and 8% more than ten times (-2 since the last wave).

Q1. During 2013, how many times did you travel for professional or personal reasons where you were away from home for a minimum of one night?

Base: Total number of respondents – EU28

The socio-demographic data shows that people who travelled at least once in 2013 are most likely to:

- be aged 15-39 (75%, compared with 63% of people aged 55 and over)
- have the highest education levels (78% vs. 50% of respondents who left school aged 15 or under)
- live in a large town (74% vs. 66% of people who live in rural villages)
- be employees (81% vs. 66% of manual workers and 62% of respondents who are not working)

3.2 Holidays of a minimum of four nights taken in 2013

– A majority of people who travelled for personal reasons in 2013 went away for between four and 13 nights –

Respondents who travelled at least once in 2013 were then asked about their travels for personal reasons and about the duration of their trips. Multiple answers were allowed.

A majority of respondents (57%) said that they took holidays that lasted between four and 13 nights away, while just under half (48%) mentioned short-stay trips of up to three nights. A quarter of respondents (27%) travelled for more than 13 consecutive nights, while just under a quarter (23%) went only on short-stay trips. A minority (6%) of the respondents who travelled in 2013 did not travel at all for personal reasons.

Q2A. Thinking only about your personal travels in 2013, which of the following types of holiday did you take?

EU28

Base: 70% from the total number of respondents – EU28

(Those who travelled for a minimum of one night in 2013)

In 20 of the 35 countries, at least 50% of people who travelled in 2013 took a personal trip that lasted between four and 13 consecutive nights. The highest proportions were observed in Norway (76%), Denmark (73%), Austria (69%) and Sweden (69%), while Latvia (31%), Turkey (35%), Romania (36%) and Bulgaria (37%) recorded the lowest.

In 15 countries, at least 50% of respondents took a short-stay trip of up to three consecutive nights last year. Finland (69%), Estonia (63%) and Latvia (63%) had the highest proportion of people who took this kind of holiday, while Cyprus (34%), France (37%) and Malta (37%) had the lowest. Interestingly, almost one in four respondents (23%) went exclusively on short-stay trips in 2013. This proportion is highest in Latvia (53%), Hungary (44%) and Romania (44%). At the other end of the scale, only 11% of people in the Netherlands and 12% in Luxembourg went exclusively on short-stay trips.

Norway (46%), the Netherlands (45%) and Luxembourg (42%) stand out as having by far the highest proportions of people who spent more than 13 consecutive nights away. Conversely, the lowest proportions of people who took a trip of this duration were in Bulgaria (7%) and Slovakia (8%).

In three countries, at least a tenth of the people who travelled said spontaneously that they did not travel for personal reasons in 2013: Bulgaria (19%), Slovakia (13%) and Italy (10%).

A review of the socio-demographic data shows that:

- People aged 55 and over (32%) are the most likely to have taken a holiday lasting more than 13 consecutive nights, with 25-39 year-olds (23%) the least likely to have done so. Conversely, 15-24 year-olds (53%) are the most likely to have taken a short-stay trip (up to three nights), while respondents aged 55 and over (44%) are the least likely to have done so.
- Respondents with a higher level of education are more likely to have taken all types of holiday.
- People from large towns are more likely than those from rural villages to have taken a holiday lasting more than 13 consecutive nights (31% compared with 24%).
- Employees are the most likely to have taken all types of holiday, while manual workers are the least likely.

3.3 Type of accommodation

– Staying in paid accommodation with more than 20 guests, or at friends or relatives, are the most common types of accommodation used –

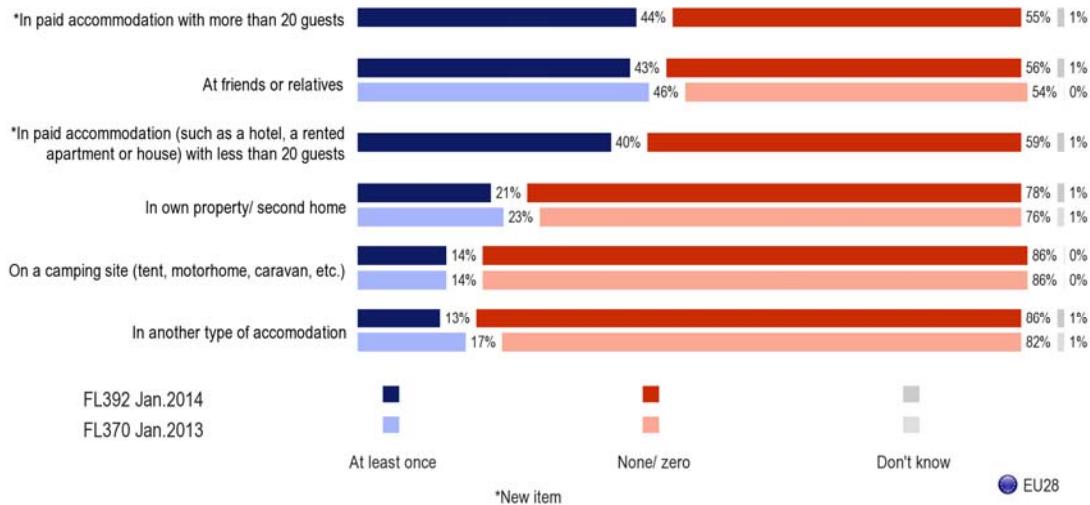

Respondents who travelled for at least one night in 2013 were then asked about the kind of accommodation they stayed in on holidays lasting a minimum of four consecutive nights.

Over four in ten respondents (44%) in this group stayed in paid accommodation with more than 20 guests. A slightly lower proportion (40%) stayed in paid accommodation with fewer than 20 guests. Interestingly, 24% stayed exclusively in paid accommodation (no matter the size).

Over four in ten respondents (43%, -3 since January 2013) stayed with friends or relatives. A fifth of people (21%, -2) stayed in their own property/second home, while 14% (no change) stayed on a campsite, and 13% (-4) stayed in another type of accommodation.

More than a third of respondents (35%) never stayed in non-paid accommodation (no matter the size), while 41% used a combination of both paid and non-paid accommodation.

Q2B. Thinking only about your personal travels in 2013, how many times did you stay for a minimum of four consecutive nights in the following types of accommodation?

Base: 70% from the total number of respondents – EU28

(Those who travelled for a minimum of one night in 2013)

At national level, the data shows that respondents in Malta (65%), Israel (64%), Austria (63%) and Norway (61%) are the most likely to have stayed in paid accommodation with more than 20 guests. At least 50% of the respondents in 11 countries did this. In contrast, only 23% of respondents in Croatia, 26% in the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and 27% in Romania stayed in this type of accommodation in 2013.

At least six in ten people in France (61%), Montenegro (60%) and Poland (60%) stayed with friends or relatives, and over 50% of people did so in 12 of the 35 countries. Staying with friends or relatives was least common in Malta (18%), the Netherlands (28%) and Austria (28%). Most countries have recorded declines since January 2013 in the proportion of people who stayed with friends or relatives, most strikingly in Latvia (40%, -16), Portugal (39%, -13) and the Czech Republic (41%, -10). However, Israel (30%, +10) saw a large increase in the proportion of respondents who opted for this type of holiday.

A majority of people in three countries – Belgium (53%), Norway (52%) and Slovenia (52%) – stayed in paid accommodation with less than 20 guests. Respondents in Latvia (22%) and Estonia (24%) were least likely to holiday in this kind of accommodation.

Norway (54%) is the only country where at least half of the respondents holidayed for at least four nights at their own property/second home. This option was also popular in Slovakia (45%) and Turkey (40%). In contrast, only 8% of respondents in Israel and 9% in the Netherlands stayed in their own property. The proportion of people who had this type of holiday fell in most countries compared with the previous survey, with the largest drops in the Czech Republic (29%, -15), Spain (25%, -10) and Estonia (22%, -8). However, Turkey (40%, +9) and Serbia (34%, +6) bucked the overall trend by registering sizeable increases.

Staying on a campsite was most popular among respondents in the Netherlands (31%), Iceland (27%) and the UK (21%), though elsewhere – such as Malta (2%), Cyprus (3%) and Croatia (4%) – very few people spent their holiday this way. Norway (17%, +10) and the UK (21%, +5) recorded the biggest increases in the proportion of respondents who chose to stay on campsites, while the largest declines were seen in the Czech Republic (13%, -7), Romania (11%, -6) and Turkey (6%, -6).

At least a fifth of respondents in Norway (21%) and Slovenia (20%) stayed in another type of accommodation, although relatively few people did so in most other countries. Slovenia (+10) also recorded the most substantial increase in the proportion of respondents who stayed in another type of accommodation, while the biggest declines occurred in Latvia (8%, -7) and Portugal (5%, -7).

Base: 69% from the total number of respondents – all surveyed countries

(Those who travelled for a minimum of one night in 2013)

The socio-demographic analysis shows that:

- While respondents aged 55 and over are the most likely to have stayed at least once in paid accommodation with more than 20 guests, younger respondents are more likely to have stayed in all the other types of accommodation.
- People with a higher level of education are more likely to have stayed at least once in all types of paid accommodation.
- Employees and self-employed people are also generally more likely to have stayed at least once in all kinds of paid accommodation.

IV. OBSTACLES TO GOING ON HOLIDAY IN 2013

While the previous chapter focused on respondents who went on holiday last year, the fourth chapter focuses on those who did not go away in 2013 and their reasons for not doing so.

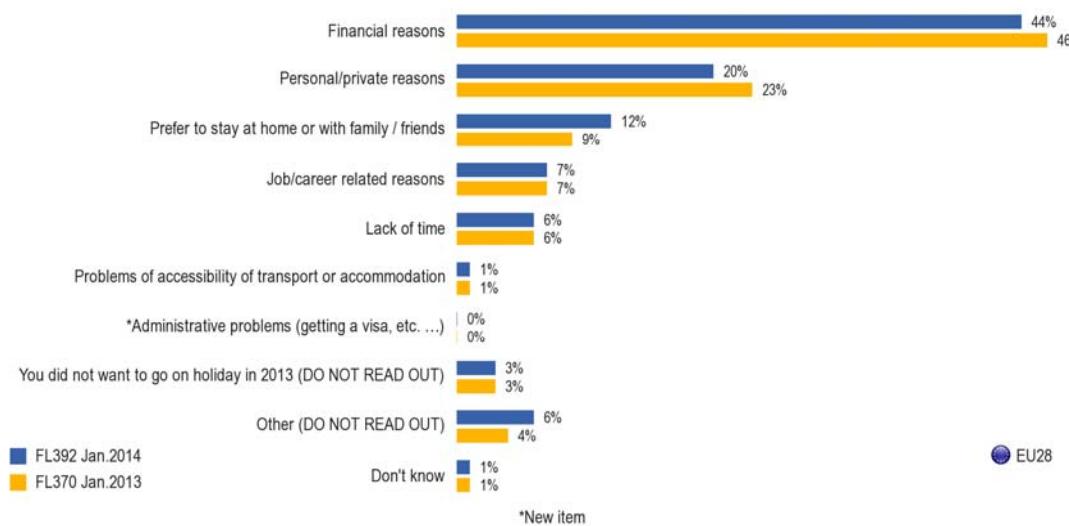

– Close to half of respondents who did not go on holiday in 2013 say it was mainly for financial reasons –

Respondents who said they did not go on holiday in 2013 were asked the reasons why they had not done so. They were invited to state their main reason, and then any other relevant reasons.

The main cause, mentioned first by over four in ten respondents (44%), was financial reasons – a slight decline (-2) since the last wave.

A fifth of respondents (20%, -3) mention personal or private reasons for not going away. One in eight respondents (12%, +3) say they prefer to stay at home or with family/friends, while 7% (no change) pointed to job or career-related reasons. Lack of time is mentioned by 6% (no change) of respondents, and 1% (no change) say they had problems accessing transport or accommodation.

Q3A. What were the main reasons why you did not go on holiday in 2013? Firstly?

Base: 30% from the total number of respondents – EU28

(Those who did not take a personal holiday during 2012)

In 12 countries, at least 50% of the respondents who did not go on holiday in 2013 gave financial reasons as an explanation. Respondents in Greece (74%), Cyprus (69%), Bulgaria (66%) and Serbia (66%) are the most likely to cite financial reasons. In contrast, only 8% of people in Norway and 12% of those in Sweden say they did not go on holiday in 2013 for these reasons. This proportion increased significantly in Serbia (66%, +17), Cyprus (69%, +13), Ireland (57%, +9) and Turkey (47%, +9), but declined sharply in Slovenia (41%, -14), Bulgaria (66%, -7) and the United Kingdom (40%, -7).

In Luxembourg, four in ten respondents (40%) give personal or private reasons for not taking a holiday in 2013, as do 37% in Norway and 34% in Austria. In contrast, respondents in Greece (9%) and Portugal and Turkey (both 11%) are the least inclined to mention personal reasons. This proportion increased significantly in Slovenia (29%, +13) and Austria (34%, +8) and declined substantially in Germany (29%, -13), Israel (17%, -11) and Serbia (21%, -11).

Finland (32%) has by far the highest proportion of respondents who did not take a holiday last year mainly because they prefer to stay at home or with family or friends. This is also a common reason in Denmark and Sweden (both 20%), but is least-mentioned in Montenegro (3%) and Serbia (3%). There was a significant increase in the number of people citing this reason in Finland (32%, +12), Germany (14%, +7) and Poland (14%, +7) compared to the year before, while the opposite trend can be observed in Ireland (9%, -6).

In three countries – Iceland (14%), Luxembourg (11%) and Austria (10%) – at least a tenth of respondents gave job or career-related reasons for not going on holiday in 2013. There was a substantial rise in the proportion of people who gave this answer in Iceland (+9), with an even larger decline occurring in Norway (2%, -22).

At least 10% of respondents mention lack of time in the five following countries: Austria (14%), Iceland (13%), the Czech Republic (11%), Montenegro (10%) and Poland (10%). Croatia (5%, +5) saw the biggest increase in the proportion of respondents giving this answer, while Sweden (2%, -6) recorded the largest drop.

*Not asked in FL370 (Jan.2013)

Base: 30% from the total number of respondents – all surveyed countries

(Those who did not take a personal holiday during 2012)

The picture is very similar when we consider the reasons mentioned by respondents for not going on holiday last year. A majority of respondents (54%) did not do so for financial reasons, while about a third (32%) cite personal/private reasons. More than a fifth (22%) say that they prefer to stay at home with family/friends, 14% mention job/career-related reasons and 13% blame the lack of time. Only 3% had problems with the accessibility of transport or accommodation, while 1% had administrative problems. Over a tenth (13%) spontaneously give other reasons as to why they did not go away, and 5% say spontaneously that they did not want to go on holiday last year.

Q3T. What were the main reasons why you did not go on holiday in 2013?

EU28

Base: 30% from the total number of respondents – EU28

(Those who did not take a personal holiday during 2012)

In 27 countries, financial reasons are the most common reason for not going on holiday last year, while at least 50% of people mention financial reasons in 21 countries. Respondents in Greece (81%), Cyprus (76%) and Serbia (75%) are the most likely to cite finances among the reasons why they did not go on holiday in 2013. In contrast, only 13% of respondents in Sweden and 14% in Norway mention financial reasons.

Personal or private reasons are the most common reason for not going on holiday in seven countries. Luxembourg (51%), the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (50%) and Montenegro (47%) had the highest proportions of respondents who cite personal/private reasons, while Turkey (15%) and Portugal (17%) had the lowest.

Finland (48%) has by far the highest proportion of respondents who did not take a holiday last year because they prefer to stay at home or with family or friends; this is also the top answer among respondents in Finland. At least three in ten people in Belgium (37%), France (32%), Luxembourg (31%) and Austria (30%) also give this reason, while the lowest numbers giving this reason are in Serbia (6%), Cyprus (10%) and Bulgaria (10%).

In most countries, relatively few people give job or career-related reasons for not taking a holiday in 2013. Respondents in Luxembourg (19%), Iceland (18%) and Latvia (18%) were most likely to do so.

In eight countries, at least a fifth of respondents say that a lack of time prevented them from going on holiday, led by Austria (27%) and Iceland (24%).

The socio-demographic data shows that:

- Women are more likely than men to mention financial (57% vs. 51%) or personal reasons (35% vs. 28%) for not going on holiday last year, while men are more likely to mention job/career-related reasons (18% vs. 10%) and lack of time (16% vs. 10%).
- People aged 25-54 (63%) are the most likely to cite financial reasons, while those aged 15-24 (45%) are, surprisingly, the least likely to do so. 15-24 year-olds are the most likely to say they lacked the time (31% vs. 6% of people aged 55 and over), while the latter are the most inclined to mention personal/private reasons (39% vs. 16% of 15-24 year-olds).

- Self-employed respondents (36%) are the most likely to say they had career/job-related reasons for not going on holiday, while those who are not working (6%) are the least likely to say this. Self-employed respondents are also the most likely to cite lack of time (24% vs. 8% of respondents who are not working).

V. HOLIDAY PLANS FOR 2014

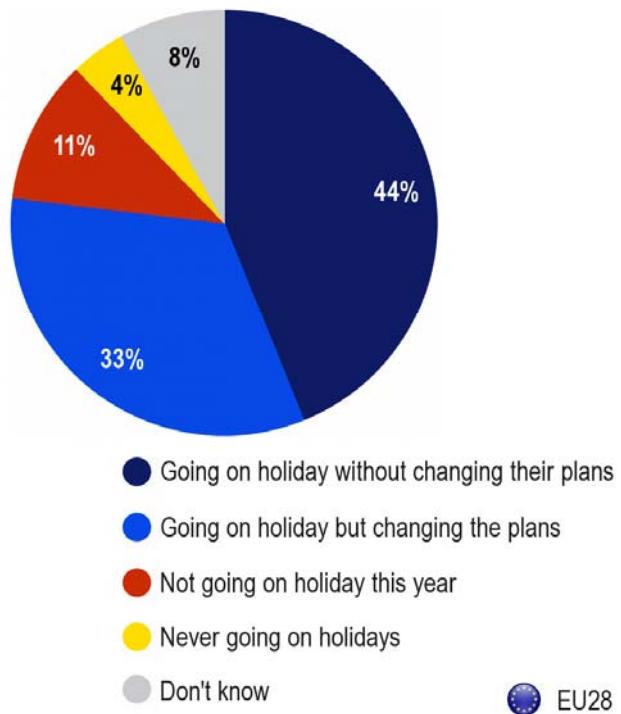

The fifth and final chapter of the report focuses on respondents' holiday plans for the coming year. It first analyses the impact of the current economic situation on their holiday plans for 2014, before turning to the expected duration of their holiday and on the destinations they plan to visit.

5.1 Impact of the current economic situation on holiday plans for 2014

- Only about a tenth of respondents have decided not to go on holiday this year because of the current economic situation –

All respondents were asked whether the current economic situation had an impact on their holiday plans for 2014. Over four in ten people (44%) say they will go on holiday this year without changing their plans, while a third (33%) will still go on holiday but will change their plans. About a tenth (11%) will not go on holiday as a result of the economic situation, while 4% say they never go on holiday. Finally, 8% cannot say whether the economic situation will affect their plans.

Q13(2). Does the current economic situation have an impact on your holiday plans for 2014?

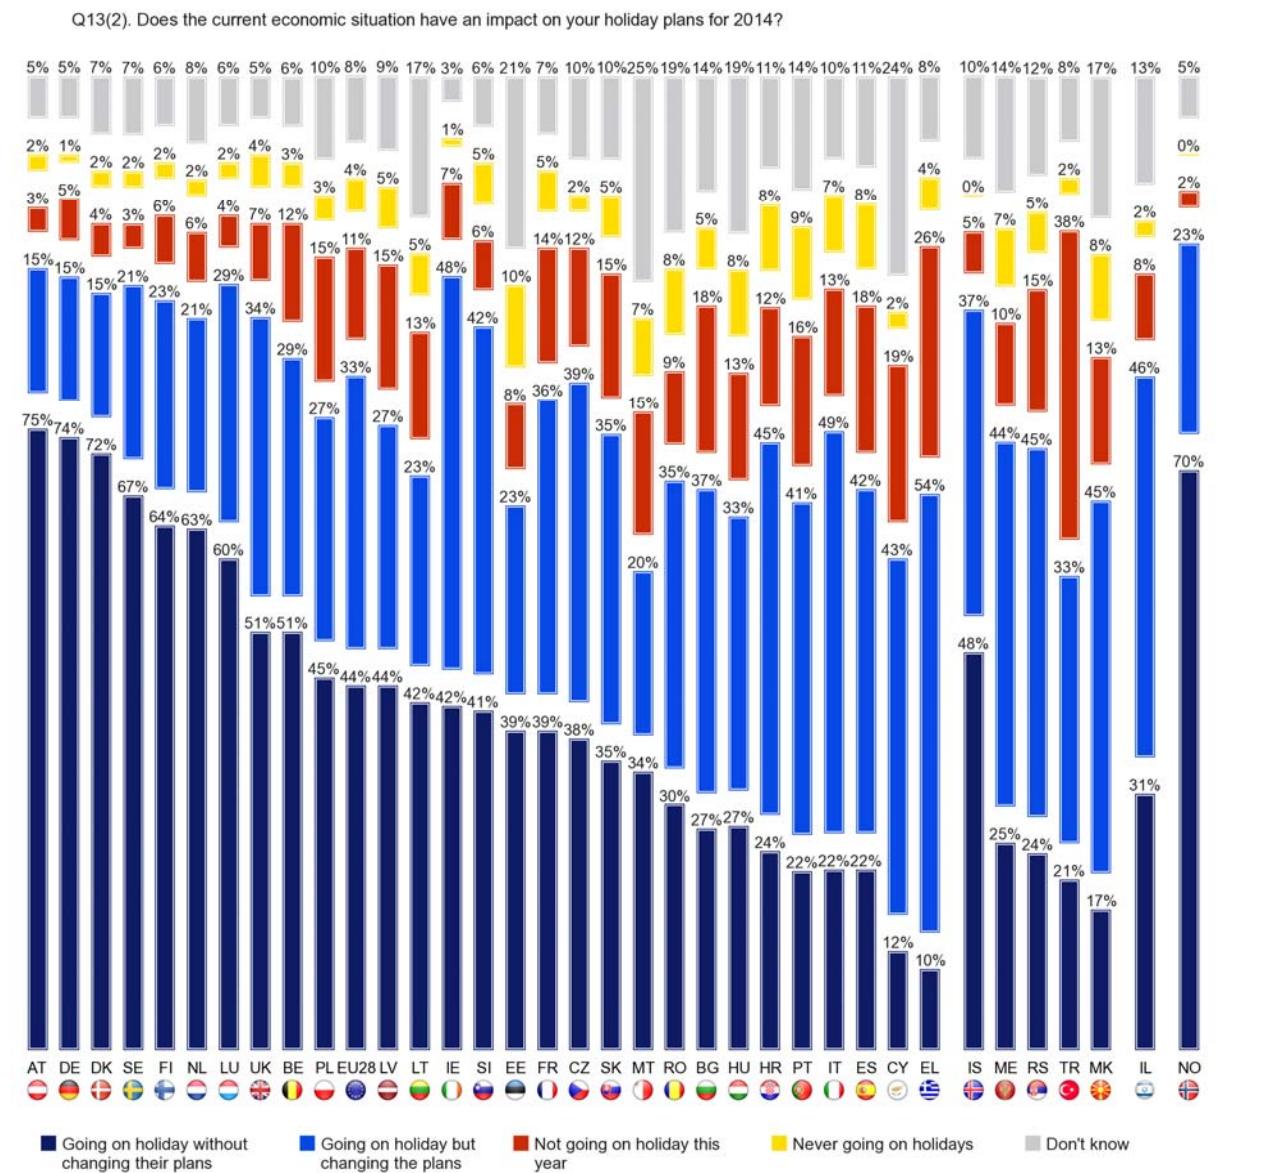

Base: Total number of respondents – EU28

In ten countries, over 50% of respondents say that they will go on holiday without changing their plans, and in four countries over 70% of people say this: Austria (75%), Germany (74%), Denmark (72%) and Norway (70%). At the other end of the scale, less than a fifth of people give this answer in three countries: Greece (10%), Cyprus (12%) and the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (17%).

In Greece (54%), over half of the respondents say that they will still go on holiday but will change their plans, as do almost half in Italy (49%) and Ireland (48%). In 12 countries, at least four in ten people will go on holiday while changing their plans.

Two countries stand out as having an especially high proportions of respondents who say they will not go on holiday as a result of the economic situation: Turkey (38%) and Greece (26%). At least 15% of respondents give this response in 10 countries, although in many countries only a small minority say they will abandon their holiday plans altogether.

Estonia (10%) is the only country in which a tenth of respondents say that they never go on holiday. In Malta (25%), one in four respondents were not able to give an answer.

Base: Total number of respondents – all surveyed countries

As mentioned above, one third of respondents (33%) say that the economic situation had an impact their holiday plans. This impact is reflected in a number of ways.

One in five respondents (20%) say that they will go on holiday but that they will spend less. This is the most common response in ten countries, including Greece (39%), Cyprus (33%), Slovenia (33%) and the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (33%). In contrast, only 8% of people in Denmark and Germany say they will spend less during their holiday.

Around a tenth of respondents (9%) say that the current economic situation will affect the length of their holiday. In most countries relatively few people give this answer, although 20% of people in Greece, 16% in Italy and 15% in Ireland do so.

At EU level, just 7% of people say that they will go on holiday at a different time of year. Ireland (13%), Italy (12%), Portugal (11%) and Israel (11%) have the highest proportions of people who plan to do this.

Very few people plan to change their holiday destination: only 4% of respondents say they will do this. Over a fifth of people in Cyprus (22%) and Malta (21%) say spontaneously that they have not yet planned their holiday for 2014.

Finally, a small minority (2%) mention that they are likely to spend more, with the highest number (6%) sharing this view in Poland.

The socio-demographic analysis shows that:

- Men are more likely than women to say their holiday plans are unchanged (47% vs. 40%).
- Respondents aged 15-24 and 25-39 (40% in both cases) are the most likely to say they are going on holiday but changing their plans, whereas those aged 55 and over (24%) are the least likely. However, the latter are the most likely to say they will not be going on holiday in 2014 (14% vs. 5% of 15-24 year-olds).
- Respondents who completed their education aged 20 and over are the most likely to go on holiday, both with and without changing their plans. Respondents who finished their education aged 15 or younger (19%) are the most likely to say that they are not going on holiday as a result of the economy.
- Employees (50%) are the most likely to say they are going on holiday without changing their plans, while people who are not working (39%) are the least likely to say this. Respondents who are not working are the most likely to say they are not going on holiday (15% vs. 6% of employees).

5.2 Duration of holidays planned for 2014

– A holiday lasting between four and 13 nights is the main type of trip planned for 2014 –

Over four in ten respondents (42%, no change compared with last year) are planning to take holidays lasting between 4 and 13 consecutive nights in 2014, while 32% (+3) are planning to take short-stay trips of up to three consecutive nights. A fifth (20%, no change) are planning more than 13 nights away.

One person in eight (12%, +2) spontaneously mention they have made no decisions yet, while (14%, -2) spontaneously say that they are not planning any kind of trip at all.

Q11. In 2014, which of the following types of holidays do you plan to take?

EU28

Base: Total number of respondents – EU28

Holidays lasting 4 to 13 consecutive nights are the most popular choice for respondents in all but four of the countries surveyed – Hungary, Latvia, Romania and Turkey – with the highest proportions of people giving this answer in Ireland (59%), Norway (58%) and the UK (57%). At the other end of the scale, just one in four respondents in Turkey (25%) and Hungary (26%) are planning trips of this duration. Compared to 2013, this option is increasingly popular among respondents from Serbia (50%, +10), Denmark (51%, +8), Ireland (59%, +7), Austria (54%, +7), Portugal (32%, +7) and Norway (58%, +7). Conversely, the proportion of respondents planning to take holidays of 4-13 nights decreased significantly in France (33%, -6), Luxembourg (53%, -6) and Slovakia (41%, -6).

Respondents in the UK (48%), Finland (47%) and Ireland (45%) are the most likely to be planning short-stay trips of up to 3 consecutive nights. However, only around one in ten respondents from Cyprus (10%), Malta (12%), the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (12%) and Serbia (12%) are planning a short-stay trip in 2014. Ireland (45%, +16), Serbia (12%, +10) and the Netherlands (34%, +8) all saw significant increases in the number of people planning this kind of trip, while Latvia (37%, -9) and Lithuania (27%, -8) both recorded sizeable declines.

Holidays of more than 13 consecutive nights are currently planned by over three in ten respondents in Norway (40%), the Netherlands (37%) and Luxembourg (32%). However, longer trips are planned by only about one in twenty respondents in Bulgaria, Hungary (both 5%), Malta (6%) and Cyprus (7%). Serbia (12%, +5) recorded the biggest increase, and Luxembourg (32%, -5) the biggest decrease.

In four countries over a fifth of people have not yet made any decisions about their 2014 holidays: Cyprus (31%), Malta (27%), the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (23%) and Estonia (22%). However, in eight countries over a fifth of respondents say they will not take any trips at all this year, the highest proportions being in Estonia (25%), Turkey (24%), Hungary (22%) and Portugal (22%).

These results are very much in line with the holidays that respondents took in 2013: respondents were most likely to take holidays lasting between 4 and 13 consecutive nights, followed by short-stay trips and longer holidays of 13 nights or more.

Q11 In 2014, which of the following types of holidays do you plan to take?

From the socio-demographic data, we can observe that:

- Respondents under the age of 25 are more likely to plan holidays lasting 4-13 nights (50% for 15-24 year-olds) than people aged 55 and over (34%). Similarly, people aged 55 and over are less likely to plan short-stay trips than other age groups (24% vs. 34-40%).
- Those who finished education before the age of 15 are less likely to plan holidays of all kinds: for example, just 25% of people in this group plan a holiday of 4 to 13 nights, compared to 49% of those whose education ended at age 20 and over.
- Employees are most likely to plan a holiday of all types than those in other occupations: for example, 55% of employees are planning a trip of 4-13 nights, compared to 34% of those who are not working.

5.3 Destinations chosen for 2014

- Over four in ten respondents intend to take a holiday in their own country in 2014 –

Looking ahead to their 2014 holiday, respondents who said previously that they planned to go away now discussed where they intend to go. They were asked first about their one main holiday. Over four in ten people (42%, +1 compared with 2013) say they plan to spend their main holiday in their country, while almost three in ten (29%, no change) intend to spend their holiday somewhere in the EU. Roughly one in six respondent (16%, no change) plan to travel to a country outside the EU, while 14% do not know where they will go⁷.

Q12A. In which country do you plan to spend your main holiday in 2014? By 'main holiday' we mean the holiday that will be the most important for you in 2014.

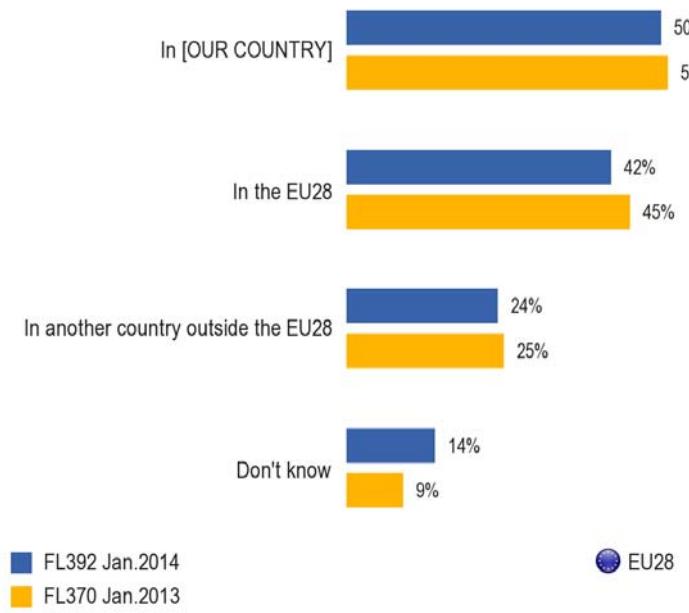

Base: 71% from the total number of respondents – EU28

(Those who plan to take holidays during 2014)

Next, the respondents were asked in which countries they plan to spend holidays – both their main holidays and others – in 2014. This time half of the respondents (50%, -1) say they will spend a holiday in their country, with over four in ten (42%, -3) anticipating that they will spend their holiday in an EU country. About a quarter of people (24%, -1) say they will go to another country outside the EU, while 14% (+5) don't know where they will go.

⁷ It should be noted that the total percentage shown in the following graph may exceed 100% due to rounding.

Q12T. In which countries do you plan to spend your holidays in 2014?

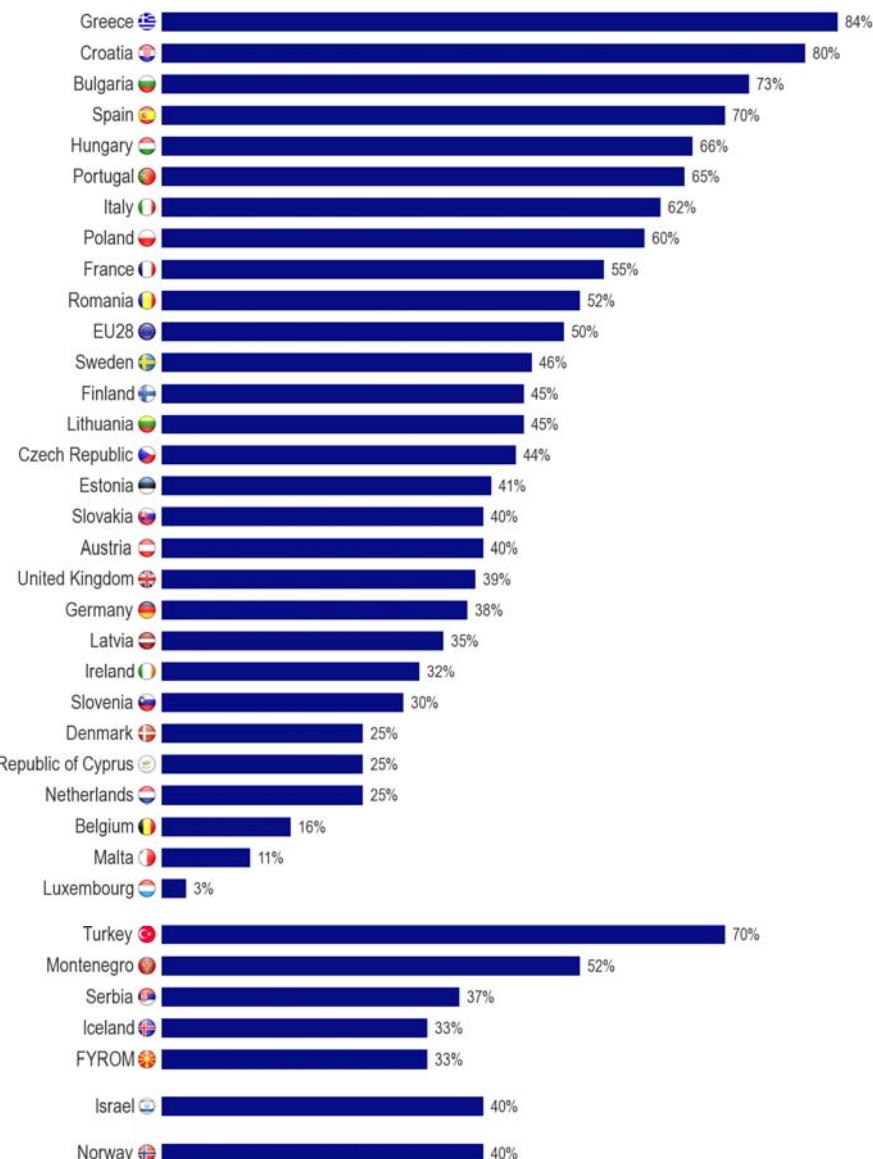

Base: 71% from the total number of respondents – EU28

(Those who plan to take holidays during 2014)

At individual country level, and looking here at all the holidays the respondents plan to take next year, the data shows that in ten EU Member States more than 50% of people intend to spend their holiday in their country. In Greece, 84% of people plan to do this, as do 80% in Croatia and 73% in Bulgaria. But at the other extreme, only 3% of people in Luxembourg, 11% in Malta and 16% in Belgium intend to take a holiday in their own country.

Question: Q12T. In which countries do you plan to spend your holidays in 2014?

Answers: In [OUR COUNTRY]

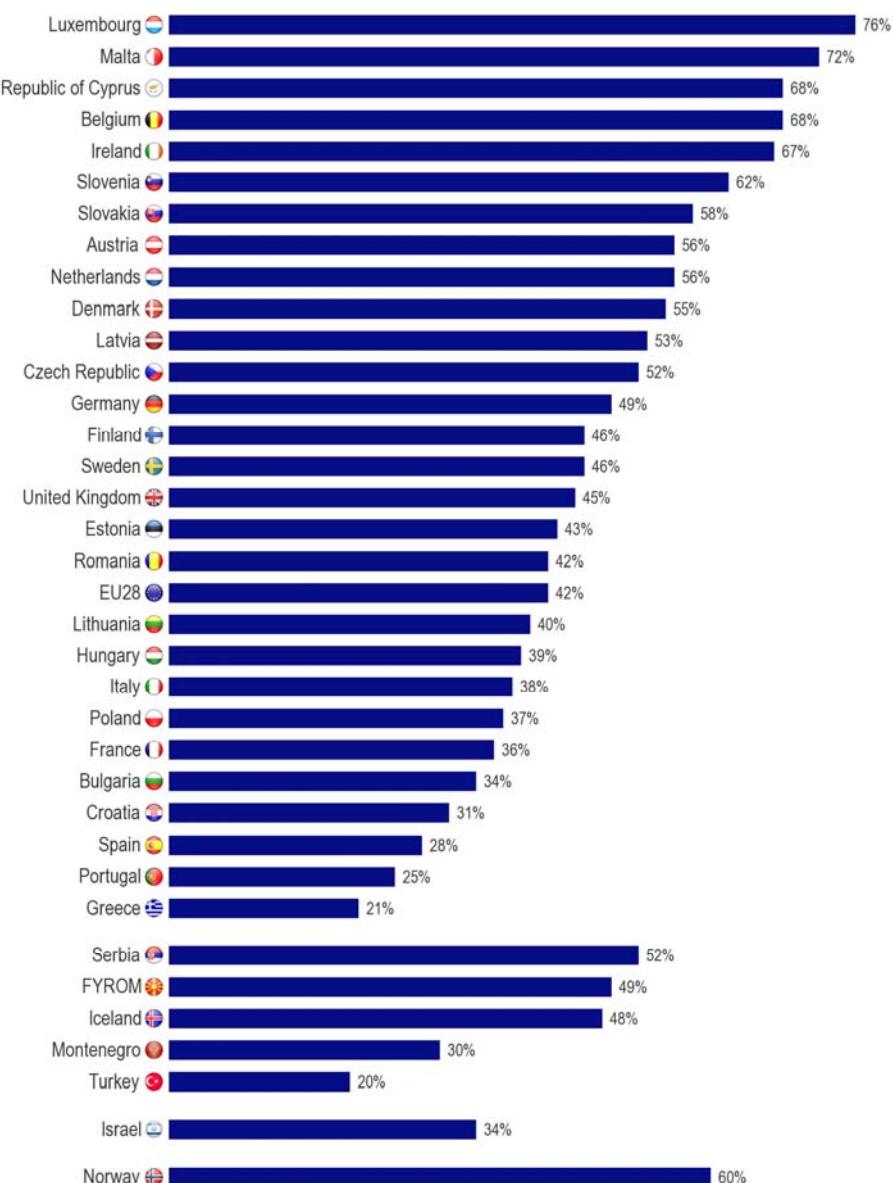

Base: 68% from the total number of respondents – all surveyed countries

(Those who plan to take holidays during 2014)

As for holidays within the EU, this time more than half of the respondents in 12 EU countries say that they are planning this kind of holiday. Luxembourg (76%) has the highest proportion of respondents who intend to travel to another EU country, followed by Malta (72%), Belgium (68%) and Cyprus (68%). However, no more than a quarter of people expect to go to an EU country in Turkey (20%), Greece (21%) and Portugal (25%).

Question: Q12T. In which countries do you plan to spend your holidays in 2014?

Answers: In the EU28

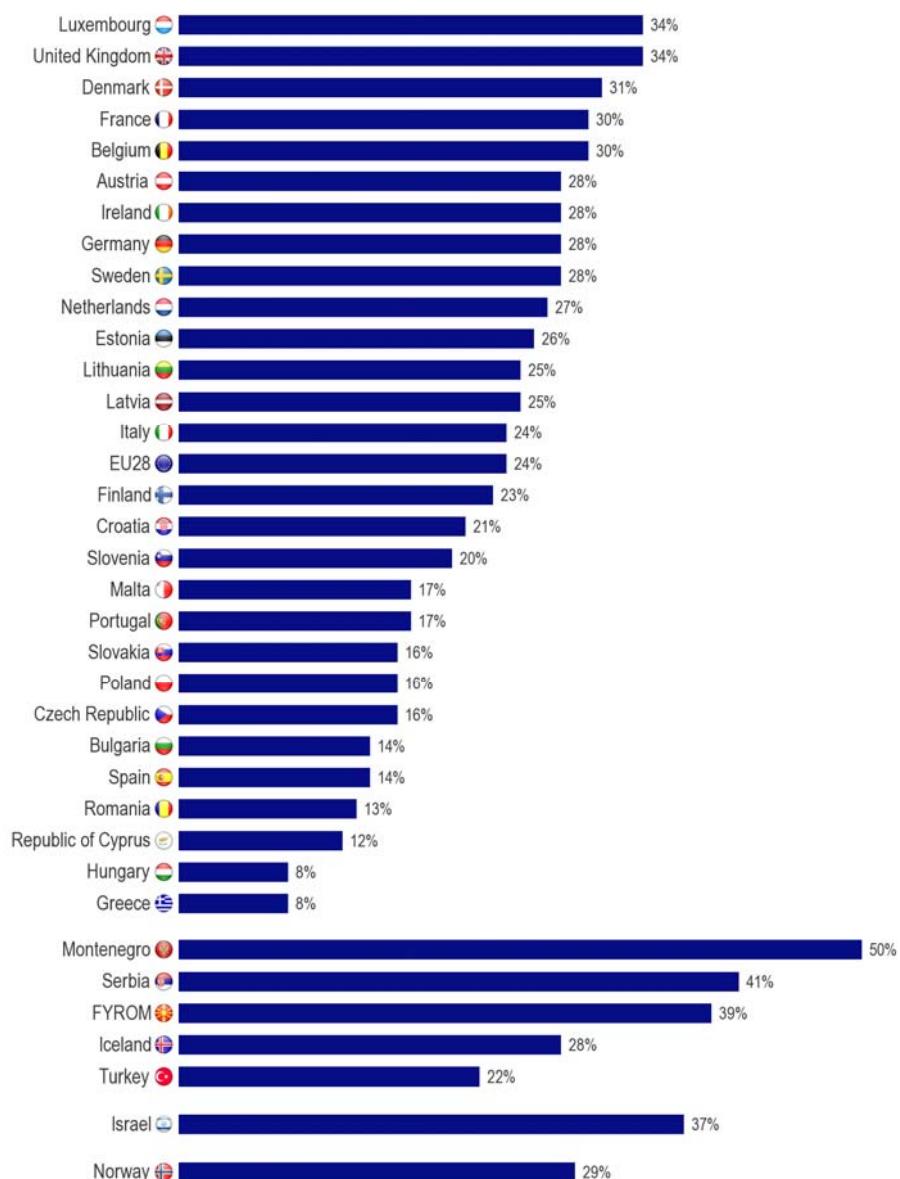

Base: 68% from the total number of respondents – all surveyed countries

(Those who plan to take holidays during 2014)

At least 30% of people in five EU Member States say that they will travel to a country outside the EU: Luxembourg (34%), the UK (34%), Denmark (31%), France (30%) and Belgium (30%). Travel to non-EU countries is more common among respondents living outside the EU, such as in Montenegro (50%), Serbia (41%), the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (39%) and Israel (37%). In contrast, less than a tenth of respondents in Greece and Hungary (both 8%) expect to travel outside the EU in 2014.

Question: Q12T. In which countries do you plan to spend your holidays in 2014?

Answers: In another country outside the EU28

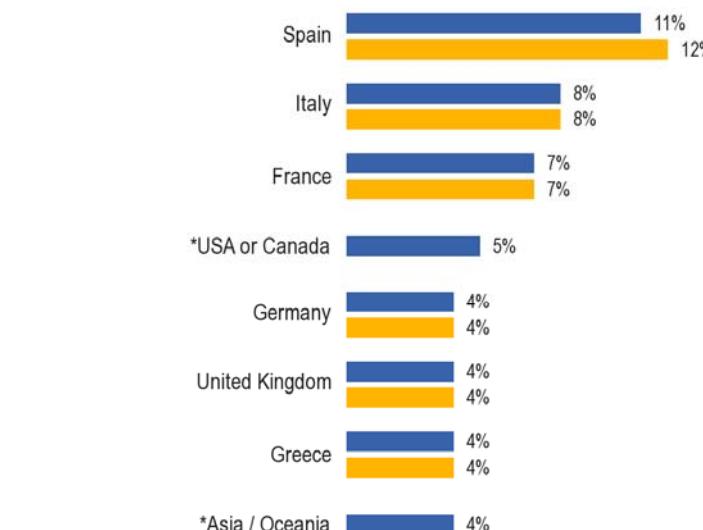

Base: 68% from the total number of respondents – all surveyed countries

(Those who plan to take holidays during 2014)

The respondents also named the specific countries which they plan to visit in 2014. Spain (11%, -1 compared with 2013) is the most popular planned destination, followed by Italy (8%, no change) and France (7%, no change). 5% of respondents plan to visit the US or Canada, while 4% say they will go to Germany, the UK, Greece, or Asia/Oceania.

The socio-demographic results show that:

- Older respondents are more likely to go on holiday in their own country: 54% of people aged 55 and over plan to do this, compared with only 38% of 15-24 year-olds.
- While 61% of people who left school aged 15 or under plan to holiday in their own country, only 48% of those who finished their education aged 20 and over intend to do so. However, those with a higher level of education are more inclined to go on holiday in other countries both inside and outside the EU.
- 55% of manual workers and 53% of people who do not work say they will spend their holiday in their own country, whereas only 44% of self-employed people and 47% of employees intend to do so. Self-employed people are more likely than manual workers to spend their holiday outside the EU, by a margin of 29% to 18%.

FLASH EUROBAROMETER 392

"Preferences of Europeans towards tourism"

TECHNICAL SPECIFICATIONS

Between the 6 and the 10 of January 2014, TNS political & social, a consortium created between TNS UK and TNS opinion, carried out the survey FLASH EUROBAROMETER 392 about 'Preferences of Europeans towards tourism'. This survey has been requested by the EUROPEAN COMMISSION, Directorate-General for Enterprise and Industry. It is a general public survey co-ordinated by the Directorate-General for Communication ('Strategy, Corporate Communication Actions and Eurobarometer' Unit).

The FLASH EUROBAROMETER 392 covers the population of the respective nationalities of the European Union Member States, resident in each of the 28 Member States and aged 15 years and over. It was also conducted in the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Iceland, Israel, Norway, the Republic of Serbia, Turkey and Montenegro . The survey covers the national population of citizens as well as the population of citizens of all the European Union Member States that are residents in these countries and have a sufficient command of the national languages to answer the questionnaire.

All interviews were carried using the TNS e-Call center (our centralized CATI system); except in the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Israel, the Republic of Serbia and Montenegro where interviews were carried out using local call center systems. In every country respondents were called both on fixed lines and mobile phones; except in the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Israel, the Republic of Serbia and Montenegro where respondents were called on fixed lines only. The basic sample design applied in all countries is multi-stage random (probability). In each household, the respondent was drawn at random following the "last birthday rule".

TNS have developed their own RDD sample generation capabilities based on using contact telephone numbers from responders to random probability or random location face to face surveys, such as Eurobarometer, as seed numbers. The approach works because the seed number identifies a working block of telephone numbers and reduces the volume of numbers generated that will be ineffective. The seed numbers are stratified by NUTS2 region and urbanisation to approximate a geographically representative sample. From each seed number the required sample of numbers are generated by randomly replacing the last two digits. The sample is then screened against business databases in order to exclude as many of these numbers as possible before going into field. This approach provides a consistent approach across all countries.

Readers are reminded that survey results are estimations, the accuracy of which, everything being equal, rests upon the sample size and upon the observed percentage. With samples of about 1,000 interviews, the real percentages vary within the following confidence limits:
